"I had my own toes over the edge tonight. I was mistook for you, which compliment I don't aim to have repeated."

Gleinster onestioned him eagerly.

"We're about the same height, an' these bats of ours are alike. Just as I came by that lumber pile down yonder a man hopped out an' throwed a 'gat' under my nose. He was quicker than light and near blowed my skelp into the next block before he saw who I was. Then he dropped his weepon and said:

"My mistake. Go on.' I accepted his apology."

"Could you see who he was?"

"Sure; Guess."

"I can't."

"It was Brother Kit."

"Lord!" ejaculated Gleinster. "Do you think he's after me?"

"He ain't after nobody else, an' take my word for it, it's got nothin' to do with McNamara nor that gamblin' row. He's here after her, that's all. There's some other reason."

This was the first mention Dexter had made of the affair at the Northern.

"I don't know why he should have it in for me. I never did him any favor, but another reminded spitefully.

"Well, you watch out anyhow. I'd wager how McNamara an' all the crooks he's got like that gambler."

During the next few days Roy undertook to meet the proprietor of the Northern face to face, but the Kid had vanished completely from his haunts. He was not in his gambling hall at night nor on the street by day. The young man was still looking for him on the evening of the dance at the hotel when he chanced to meet one of the vigilantes, who inquired of him:

"Aren't you late for the meeting?"

"What meeting?"

After seeing that they were alone the other stated:

"There's an assembly tonight at 11 o'clock. Something important, I think. I supposed, of course, you knew about it."

"It's strange I wasn't notified," said Roy. "It's probably an oversight. I'll go along with you."

Together they crossed the river to the less frequented part of the town and knocked at the door of a large unlighted warehouse, flanked by a high board fence. The building faced the street, and was inclosed on the other three sides by this ten foot wall. Inside of which were stored large quantities of cord wood and lumber. After some delay they were admitted and passing down through the dim lit, high banked lanes of merchandise came to the rear room, where they were admitted again. This compartment had been fitted up for the warm storage of perishable goods during the cold weather and, being without windows, made an ideal place for clandestine gatherings.

TO WEAK TO WORK

Wm. Brosseau of Waterloo, Quebec, Suffered From Indigestion. No Appetite. Headaches and Backache.

MADE WELL BY VINOL.

Vinol is a wonderful medicine. I had no appetite; my digestion was bad; was suffering from headaches and backache; I was so weak that I had not been able to work for months when a friend advised me to take Vinol. After I had taken one bottle I noticed my health was improving; I continued its use and to-day am perfectly well. It is with pleasure that I recommend Vinol to all those who need a flesh, nerve or tissue builder." Wm. Brosseau, Waterloo, Quebec.

This is because Vinol is the best cod liver and iron tonic in the world. It creates pure, rich blood, strengthens the digestive organs, makes rich, red blood and replaces weakness with strength. Such is the effect of Vinol in cases of weak, run-down conditions or for feeble old people is simply wonderful.

We invite all old people, delicate children, weak, run-down persons, convalescents, or those suffering from chronic colds, coughs or bronchitis in this vicinity to try Vinol on our offer to return their money if it does not prove as we say. We make this offer to show our faith in Vinol.

"Oh, don't think that I'll give the snap away!" said the other; "but I warn you again not to enter Stillman's home."

He followed out into the night to find that Dextry had disappeared, evidently wishing to avoid argument. Roy had seen signs of unrest beneath the prospector's restraint during the past few days, and indications of a fierce hunger to vent his spleen on the men who had robbed him of his most sacred rights. He was of an intolerant, vindictive nature that would go to any length for vengeance. Retribution was part of his creed.

On his way home the young man looked at his watch to find that he had but an hour to determine his course. Instinct prompted him to join his friends and to even the score with the men who had injured him so bitterly, for, measured by standards of the frontier, they were pirates with their lives forfeit. Yet he could not countenance this step. If only the vigilantes would be content with making an example—but he knew they would not. The blood hunger of a mob is easy to whet and hard to hold. McNamara would resist, as would Voorhees and the district attorney, then there would be bloodshed, riot, chaos. The soldiers would be called out and martial law declared, the streets would become skirmish grounds. The vigilantes would rout them without question, for every citizen of the north would rally to their aid, and such men could not be stopped. The judge would go down with the rest of the ring, and what would happen to—her?

He took down his Winchester, oiled and cleaned it, then buckled on a belt of cartridges. Still he wrestled with himself. He felt that he was being ground between his loyalty to the vigilantes and his own conscience. The girl was one of the gang, he reasoned—she had schemed with them to betray him through his love, and she was pledged to the one man in the world whom he hated with fanatical fury. Why should he think of her in this hour? Six months back he would have looked with jealous eyes upon the right to lead the vigilantes, but this change that had mastered him—what was it? Not cowardice, nor caution. No. Yet, being intangible, it was none the less marked, as his friends had shown him an hour since.

He slipped out into the night. The mob might do as it pleased elsewhere, but no man should enter her house. He found a light shining from her parlor window, and, taking the shade up a few inches, stole close. Peering through, he discovered Struve and Helen talking. He shook back into the shadows and remained hidden for a considerable time after the lawyer left, for the dancers were returning from the hall and passed close by. When the last group had chatted and sung down the street he turned to the front of the house, and ascending the steps, knocked sharply. As Helen appeared at the door, he stepped inside and closed it after him.

The girl's hair lay upon her neck and shoulders in tumbled brown masses, while her breast heaved tumultuously at the sudden, grim sight of him. She stepped back against the wall, her wondrous, deep gray eyes wide and troubled, the blush of modesty struggling with the pallor of dismay.

The picture pained him like a knife thrust. This girl was his bitterest enemy—no hope of her was for him. He forgot for a moment that she was false and plotting, then, recalling it, spoke as roughly as he might and stalked his errand. Then the old man had appeared on the stairs above, speechless with fright at what he overheard. It was evident that his nerves, so sorely strained by the events of the past week, were now snapped utterly. As human soul naked and pauls stricken is no pleasant sight, so Gleinster dropped his eyes and addressed the girl again:

"Don't take anything with you. Just dress and come with me."

The creature on the stairs above stammered and stuttered inquiringly:

"What outrage' is this, Mr. Gleinster?"

"The people of Nome are up in arms, and I've come to save you. Don't stop to argue." He spoke impatiently.

"Is this some r=use to get me into your power?"

"Uncle Arthur!" exclaimed the girl sharply. Her eyes met Gleinster's and begged him to take no offense.

"I don't understand this atrocity. They must be mad!" wailed the judge. "You run over to the jail, Mr. Gleinster, and tell Voorhees to hurry guards here to protect me. Helen, come to the sitting room and give the alarm. Tell them the soldiers must come at once."

"Hold on!" said Gleinster. "There's no use of doing that—the wires are cut; and I won't notify Voorhees—he can take care of himself. I came to help you, and if you want to escape you'll stop talking and hurry up."

"I don't know what to do," said Stillman, torn by terror and indecision. "You wouldn't hurt an old man, would you? Wait! I'll be down in a minute."

He scrambled up the stairs, tripping on his robe, seemingly forgetting his niece till she called up to him sharply:

"Stop, Uncle Arthur! You mustn't run away." She stood erect and determined. "You wouldn't do that, would you? This is our house. You represent the law and the dignity of the government. You mustn't fear a mob of ruffians. We will stay here and meet them, of course."

"Good Lord!" said Gleinster. "That's madness! These men aren't ruffians. They are the best citizens of Nome. You don't realize that this is Alaska and that they have sworn to wipe out McNamara's gang. Come along."

"Thank you for your good intentions," she said, "but we have done nothing to run away from. We will get ready to meet these cowards. You had better go or they will find you here."

She moved up the stairs and, taking the judge by the arm, led him with her. Of a sudden she had resumed control of the situation unfalteringly, and both men felt the impossibility of thwarting her. Pausing at the top, she turned and bolted down the hall.

"We are grateful for your efforts just the same, God knows!"

"Oh, I'm not going," said the young man. "If you stick, I'll do the same." He made the rounds of the first floor rooms, locking doors and windows. As a place of defense it was hopeless, and he saw that he would have to make his stand upstairs. When sufficient time had elapsed, he called up to Helen:

"May I come?"

"Yes," she replied. So he ascended, to find Stillman in the hall, half clothed and cowering while by the light from the front chamber he saw her finishing her toilet.

"Won't you come with me? It's our last chance." She only shook her head. "Well, then, get out the lights! I'll stand at that front window, and when my eyes get used to the darkness I'll be able to see them before they reach the gate."

She did as directed, taking her place beside him at the opening while the judge crept in and sat upon the bed, his heavy breathing the only sound in the room. The two young people stood so close to each other that the sweet scent of her person awoke in him an almost irresistible longing. He forgot her treachery again, forgot that she was smuthers, forgot all save that he loved her truly and purely, with a love which was like an agony to him. Her shoulder brushed his arm; he heard the soft rustling of her garment at her breast as she breathed. Some one passed in the street and she laid a hand upon his forcibly. It was very cold, very tiny and very soft, but he made no move to take it. The moments dragged along, still tense, interminable. Occasionally she leaned toward him, and he stooped to catch her whispered words. At such times her breath beat warm against his cheek, and he closed his teeth stubbornly, lest in the night a wolf dog saddened the air, then came the sound of others wrangling and snarling in a nearby corral. This is a quickened land and its cock crow breaks the midnight peace. The suspense enhanced the judge's perturbation till his chattering teeth sounded like castanets. Now and then he groaned.

The watchers had lost track of time when their strained eyes detected dark blots materializing out of the shadows.

"There they come," whispered Gleinster, forcing her back from the aperture; but she would not be denied, and returned to his side.

As the foremost figure reached the gate Roy leaned forth and spoke, not loudly, but in tones that sliced through the silence, sharp, clean and without warning.

"Halt! Don't come inside the fence." There was an instant's confusion; then, before the men beneath had time to voice or to take action, he continued: "This is Roy Gleinster talking. I told you not to molest these people, and I warn you again. We're ready for you."

The leader spoke. "You're a traitor, Gleinster."

He winced. "Perhaps I am. You betrayed me first, though; and, traitor or not, you can't come into this house."

There was a murmur at this, and some one said:

"Miss Chester is safe. All we want is the judge. We won't hang him, not if he'll wear this suit we brought along. He needn't be afraid. Tar is good for the skin."

"Oh, my God!" groaned the limb of the law.

Suddenly a man came running down the pinnaled pavement and into the glare.

"McNamara's gone and so's the marshal and the rest," he panted. There was Gleinster's silence, and then the leader growled to his men, "Scatter out and rush the house, boys." He raised his voice to the man in the window. "This is your work, you damned turncoat." His followers melted away to right and left, vaulted the fence and dodged into the shelter of the walls. The click, click of Gleinster's Winchester sounded through the room, while the sweat stood out on him. He wondered if he could do this deed, if he could really fire on these people. He wondered if his muscles would not wither and paralyze before they obeyed his command.

Helen crowded past him and, leaning half out of the opening, called loudly, her voice ringing clear and true:

"Wait! Wait a moment! I have something to say. Mr. Gleinster did not warn them. They thought you were going to attack the mines and so they rode out there before midnight. I am telling you the truth, really. They left hours ago." It was the first sign she had made, and they recognized her to a man.

There were uncertain mutterings below till a new man raised his voice. Both Roy and Helen recognized Dexter.

"Boys, we've overplayed. We don't want these people—McNamara's our meat. Old bald face up yonder has to do what he's told, and I'm agin this twenty to one midnight work. I'm goin' home." There were some whisperings then the original spokesman called for Judge Stillman. The old man tottered to the window, a pained, terror stricken object. The girl was glad he could not be seen from below.

"We won't hurt you this time, judge, but you've gone far enough. We'll give you another chance; then, if you don't make good, we'll stretch you to a lamp post. Take this as a warning."

"I shall do my d-d-duty," said the judge.

QUEEN'S PATHETIC TREASURE.

Many valuable treasures in the possession of Queen Alexandra, but none more highly valued by her than a modern milking jug of Jersey cream which she keeps in the luncheon basket of Sandringham. It was given to her by a loyal dairying friend, whose latter days had been soothed by the tender nursing and sympathy of the princess Alexandra. When the queen and princess are very exalted guests at afternoon tea in her Swiss chalet, it is from this humble but priceless jug that she pours the cream.

MEAGHER'S for Penman's Underwear.

THE DAISY CHAIN.

The double daisy chain is one of the new features for necklaces and bracelets, dog collars and dress trimmings. The chain is really not made of daisies at all, but of forget-me-nots, that dainty blue flower with a pale yellow center.

In the single flower chain only two colors are required for the beads, namely, forget-me-not blue and a pale yellow. The beads are opaque.

For the double chain three colors are required, the blue and the yellow and either transparent gold or silver beads.

The method of stringing the beads for the flower chains is extremely simple. Pour the beads into a saucer and thread a bead needle, which is nothing more than a No. 10 or 12 embroidery needle, with a length of D sewing silk.

The thread may be about one yard long, but this is a matter of choice, since the thread can be pieced at any point. Pick the beads up on the point of the needle.

An addition can be made to the chains by stringing large oval beads, either blue or white, between.

A Montreal Wholesale Fur House

BANKRUPT

A Portion of the Stock Bot by Us at About 50 Cents on the Dollar.

A well known Wholesale Fur House could not pull through the financial depression. They had too many losses in the West. Their stock was thrown on the market, and we secured all we could handle at about average of 50 cents on the dollar. You know that when we buy an article at half cost that we can sell it again at less than cost and still make money. That's what we are going to do with these furs. Turn them into cash just as quickly as you will take them out of our way. Every article is of that dependable quality that gives satisfaction. Before the failure we were regular customers of theirs and bought many thousand of dollars worth from them.

The firm name is on each article, a guarantee of quality, workmanship and style. The following prices take effect this Friday morning, November 20th. We have added to the list a few specials to our regular stock:

Here is something new and good in the line of base burners, and for appearance, material, heating and fuel saving qualities, it cannot be beat. This heater with the oven attached is equal to a great many cook stoves for baking.

It is the cheapest heater with all these good qualities combined, on the market to-day.

About the Nickle plating.

The outside parts are all nickled by a patented process which gives a white, bright and lasting polish. This high finish when combined with the swelled front presents a handsome appearance when the stove is in operation. An air tight screw draft damper gives positive control of the fire.

It is reported that about thirty-seven "porkers" met their fate at the hands of the man with the razor-bladed knife, and the barrel full of the scalding fluid with which to erase the bristles. SHOT A WHITE DEER.

Something unusual in animal kingdom has just been captured by Prince Edward hunters, and was brought home on Saturday night. It is a white deer, pure white in color save for two small black spots back of its ears. The animal is a fine looking one, of the male species, and weighs about two hundred pounds. It has a magnificent pair of antlers. The hunters returning were reticent as to which member of the camp captured this very unusual species, but it is understood that Mr. Grant Sprague, of Big Island, was the lucky shot. The animal was shot in the northern part of Hastings or Lennox and Addington. Another unusual shot made by one of the hunters who returned home Saturday night was a black fox, now a very rare animal, whose skin is indeed valuable.—Picton Gazette.

PUSSY'S NINE LIVES.

(Kansas City Star.)

Nine lives has pussy cat sitting by the grate,
The house pop chewed her up, that left eight.

Eight lives left to her before she went to heaven,
Johnny tried his air-gun, and that left seven.

With seven lives the wicked cat ate the little chicks,
Father saw her lick her chops. That left six.

With six lives the silly cat up the lean-to crept,
And walked about the tin roof while the family slept.
Uncle Tom threw a brick and hit her in the back,
Knocked her winding through the air exactly her in a sack.
Beat the sack across a rock till his fingers froze,
Standing in the starry night in his sleeping clothes,
Scouted back to bed again, and began to snore,
The cat was back upon the roof. That left four.

Four lives had pussy cat. She scratched the baby's face,
Mother wouldn't have the pesky thing about the place.
Father tied her in the sack with heavy stones, and, gee!
He threw her in the mill pond. And that left three.

With three lives left to live, did kitty mend her ways?
Yes, she was a model cat just three days.
Then she smashed the cream jar Mr. what a stew!
Clubbed 'er with the broomstick That left two.

Two lives had pussy cat, sneaking 'round the mill,
Mister Jansen, just for fun, socked cold Bill.
Bill chased her 'round and 'round Where as the fun?
She jumped in the grinding hopper. That left one.

One life has pussy cat. One while it runs,
My, she's a rarnal cat. Dancer she when boys call or does bark, it's run, cat, run,
Far, oh, one more accident, and that leaves none!

JUST A LITTLE CHILD.

I would with folded hands kneel down to-night,
Just a little child at His dear feet,
And from a humble heart keen of the blight,
The simple prayer of my lost youth repeat

With faith that oft has faltered, but remains
Still strong enough to know that he will heed,
I would forget all losses and all pains,
And penitent with a child-heart plead.

The prayer I've lisped so many times I'd say.
The simple rhyme, "I lay me down to sleep,
And if I die before I wake, oh, may God take my weary soul, and safe Is keep."

To-night from out the dim years softly steal
A troop of memories that gently wake
My soul to sweetest music, and I feel
As when I knelt and prayed to Jesus' sake!

—Lollie Belle Wylie in Atlanta Constitution.

SUCCESS.

Can you define success? A prize was offered for the best answer to the question, and this answer won:

"He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often, and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who has left the world better than he found it, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem, or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express it; who has always looked for the best in others and given the best he had; whose life was an inspiration, whose memory a benediction."

BITS FROM SHAKESPEARE.

Users of everyday catchwords are constantly quoting that ubiquitous person Shakespeare. "Dead as a door-nail," "long and short of it," "getting even," "tag-rag," "birds of a feather," "that is flat," "mum," "arrow-root," "solid," "milksop," "o'erhead," "bar and bargain," "a mere song," "dancing attendance," "send him packing," "kill with kindness," "give and take," "an eye sore," "to boot" and "the man in the moon" are all his.

DRESSING TABLE BOXES.

Articles for the dressing table are always interesting to a dainty lady, and two or three years ago, when the brocade boxes bound in gold braid first made their appearance in the shops, there was a general rush to obtain at least one. Most of these first boxes has an engraving on the lid included in glass, and while they were French and pretty, particular women noticed that their color scheme took something from the immaculate effect of the table.

A year has just been found to make them as dainty as the rest of the toilet articles. The old print has been dispensed with, and in its stead the clever girl uses a piece of linen heavily embroidered with monogram, crest,, or both, while the cover forming the sides of the box is in the same shade as the wall paper and curtains of the room. The glass keeps the lid always fresh and clean, and the box may be in constant use for hairpins and trinkets without spoiling the white effect of the dressing table.

The Eastern Ontario Fat Stock Show will be held in Ottawa on January 18th to 23d.

Black's.—Mr. George Kelley spent Sunday at his home in Chippewa.—Mr. Jas. Kellar and Joseph Baker returned home from hunting, and we are sorry to say they had very poor luck.—Miss Harriet Kelley is spending a few days with her brother George.

SHARP'S CORNERS.

The people of this neighborhood were quite surprised to see such a fall of snow. They are beginning to think that winter is near at hand. Sleigh bells were heard to-day.—Mrs. D. Allison, of Mount Pleasant, has been spending the past week with her son, Mr. T. Allison.—Mr. T. Anderson has returned from his hunting expedition, bringing out a fine large deer.—Mrs. Wm. McConnell and children, Ross and Grace, spent a few days visiting friends at Hay Bay and Bogart.—Mr. H. Graham and family moved last week on his farm over on Hungry Hill. We are beginning to think that Mr. Hughes' children and also Miss Mary Walker, who have been very ill, are improving.—Miss Sadie Haynes is visiting friends in Enterprise.—Mr. C. Sulig and family will soon be residing in our midst, having purchased Mr. A. Raymond's farm.—We are sorry to lose Mr. and Mrs. Raymond, who are busy moving to Enterprise, and we wish them every success in their new home. We also hear that Mr. and Mrs. T. Anderson are going to leave us, and to reside in Napanee. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson carry with them the best wishes of the people of this neighborhood.

FOREST MILLS.

The elements have been doing their best to fill the wells and creeks with water, and also make the ploughing impossible, but for those who have yet to finish.—Mr. and Mrs. John Richmond spent a week at her son's, W. Webb, Thomasburg.—Mr. John Armstrong returned home on Tuesday of last week, after having been away for ten weeks at Kingston hospital. The factory has closed and the people are left uneven sorry and clad. They have a little more work to handle the milk, but there can at least be paid if it gets daylight.—On Monday Mr. Armstrong had a ploughing bee, which we failed to attend, as we were ploughing until three, although there was a busy lot all the forenoon and afternoon, and as a result sleigh bells are heard jingling in the distance.—Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw, Mrs. Byrnes, Richmond and Frank McCutcheon are said to have dined at Mr. Ira Bradshaw's on Sunday evening.—Mr. Fred Bradshaw surprised his parents on his arrival home from Napanee last Sunday morning.—Boxing seems to be receiving its share of attention with a number of fights at up at the school as a means of exercise since the weather is too rough for much outdoor sport. Boxing is all right in its place, and we hope the knowledge of the use of their hands will not develop an overbearing spirit in the boys.

BALLAHAC.

The lovely snow fell on the 15th inst., frustrated the plans and stopped the merry revelle of the plough boy. A few sleighs are to be seen dashing hither and thither, but the wheels are as yet the preference of most people.—Mr. John Kearns, one of our oldest and most esteemed friend and neighbor, passed peacefully away on Wednesday last, at his daughter's, Mrs. Hy. Byrnes, where he had made his home for the past few years of his infirmity. A very large number attended the wake and funeral, showing in what high esteem Mr. Kearns was held by all who knew him. He leaves to mourn his loss six sons and three daughters, all residing in this vicinity, with the exception of Mr. Dan, of Wasaga, Mich.; Mrs. Arthur Mohan, near Kingston, and Mr. Pat. Kearns, of Camden. The deceased lived to see the good old age of 93. He was a member of the R. C. Church and always trusting in his Saviour; he was a kind and loving father, and always had a kind word and a good shake by the hand and purse to all who were in need or trouble. The greatest joy was to know that his children were all happy and comfortably situated. The funeral service was held in the R. C. vault, Erinsville, awaiting burial in the near future.—Mr. and Mrs. George Maloney attended the funeral of her grandfather on Wednesday, and were the guests over night for a few days.—Mr. P. F. Carseallen made his annual trip through here on Monday, accompanied by the assistance of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Christ church, Tamworth, held at Mrs. (Dr.) Wilson's, on Tuesday, was well attended, and all enjoyed the afternoon spent.—Mr. Tommy Howes spent Wednesday evening at Mr. John Tyner's.

The rain which came the first of the week was entirely welcomed by the farmers, who were not through with their fall ploughing.—Our cheese factory closed on Tuesday last, after a long and prosperous season.—Mr. Adam Scott entertained a small party on Hallowe'en, and all report a pleasant time.—Miss Mary and Annie McLaughlin took in Tweed ball on Monday evening.—Dr. Burrows is attending Mr. C. MOUNTAIN GROVE.

Many of the sports have taken their departure for the back woods.—Quarterly meeting was held both here and at Long Lake, the Rev. White, of Enterprise, administering communion at both places.—The Thanksgiving tea, which was held by the Ladies' Aid, in the parsonage was excellent. After tea the crowd went to the church and listened to a very interesting programme. The principal feature was the splendid lecture given by the Rev. F. White, entitled "His boyhood life in the lumber camp. Also his Christian experience with the lumbermen." Much credit is due Mr. and Mrs. Richmond in their labors to make the event a success. The proceeds amounted to $22.90.—Revival services are being conducted by the Rev. G. Richmond, there being a great need of this work.—Miss Hettie McDonald is very sick.—Also Mrs. Alex. KEEP BABY WELL.

No matter whether baby is sick or well Baby's Own Tablets should always be kept in the house. They not only cure the minor disorders of childhood, but prevent them, and should be given whenever the little ones show the slightest signs of ill ness. Children take the Tablets as readily as candy, and they are absolutely safe. Mrs. Geo. Howell, Sandy Beach, Que., says:—"My baby was greatly troubled with colic and cried night and day, but after giving him Baby's Own Tablets the trouble disappeared. I advise all mothers to use this medicine." Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CLOYNE.

A great number of hunters came back to hunt deer in the back woods. A great many have been lucky enough to secure one, while others are still living in despair, and this is the last few days they can stay or suffer the consequences. Every body have their fall work all done, as they have had such a fine fall for working.—A gang of men have been on the Scoot River, repairing the dams, for the high water in the spring.—Mrs. T. Storey and Miss Katie Hunt returned home on Thursday from Tweed, where they were visiting friends.—We were all pleased to see our blacksmith arrive in town again, after spending a week with friends around Napanee.—Mrs. Young is still in Kingston, visiting friends. Hawley and wife have moved to near Napanee.—Dr. Sergeant has returned to Kingston for a week.—The Big Dipper is still at work.—Mr. and Mrs. Martin Kennt have been renewing old acquaintances around Cloyne. We were glad to see them back once more.

COLEBROOK.

There was about four inches snow fell on Saturday night.—A. F. James, agent for the Kingston Milling Co., was watering his horse at the Colebrook Hotel on Friday last, when the horse got frightened and became unmanageable, and made a lively race up the main street in Colebrook. He was caught by Alex. Riddell. Fortunately there was not much damage done.—N. Walker is building a new stable.—Mrs. Kinkley has moved to her son-in-law's. We are sorry to lose her.—Earl Galbraith has been very ill, but is improving.—Mrs. Allen and Mrs. Ester are on the sick list. We hope they will soon be able to be out again.—Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Galbraith were visiting at C. Ward's.—Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Walker at Ira Salisbury's.—Miss Annie Gray and Miss Bertie Huffman were visiting at Mr. Norman Boyce's.—Mrs. F. S. Wartman and daughter Helen, spent Thanksgiving in Toronto.—William H. Shangraw and wife were at A. A. Shangraw's, for dinner on Sunday last.

DENBIGH.

We are having quite a taste of winter, but the little snow storm did not last very long.—Mr. Robt. Paul spent a few days sporting and visiting Mr. Samuel Lane.—Mr. and Mrs. S. Clark and family have moved to Snake Creek.—Mr. Algernon Lane is rushing his cheese factory. Mr. Albert Crabtree is the builder.—Mr. John McCoy made a business trip to Renfrew.—Mr. and Mrs. Cranshaw, visiting friends at Overton and Wolfe Island, have not yet returned.—The sports are not having very much luck this fall, some parties of six and seven only getting one deer.—Miss Ethel Shultz, Plevna spent part of last week with Mrs. E. We are all pleased to hear that Dr. Adams and family are moving to our village to-morrow.

ST. OLA.

The majority of the hunting parties broke up camp on Saturday. Some very large deer were captured this season. At the rate the deer are being slaughtered in a few years they will be very scarce in this section of the country.—Mr. Samuel Sarravant shot a black bear recently, which weighed about 350 lbs.—Misses Cora and Florence Morten, students of the Trenton High School, spent the Thanksgiving holidays with their parents.—Miss Moore, of Eldorado, has been engaged for the St. Ola public school for 1909.—Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Clarke were in Campbellford for a few days this week, visiting their daughter, Mrs. (Rev.) F. W. White.—A most distressing and fatal accident occurred near Gilmour on Wednesday, November 4th. Alma Sprackett, youngest child of Mr. George Sprackett, was playing with her little brother near some brush piles which were burning. Her clothes caught fire, and the father hearing the screams of the child, ran to see what was the matter, only to find that she was enveloped in flames. He succeeded in putting the fire out by rolling her on the ground, but not until the clothes were nearly all destroyed and the child had been fatally burned. Dr. Sprague, of Madoc, was called, but held out no hopes from the first. The following day at eleven o'clock the little girl passed away. It is a matter of great consolation that the burning was so deep that the child was not a great sufferer. The remains were placed in the Eldorado cemetery on Saturday 7th inst., and the memorial service was held in the school house at Pineview the following Sunday morning, where the little girl attended Sunday School. The service was largely attended, and much practical sympathy has been shown the family in their very sad bereavement.

MEANS GOOD HEALTH, CHEERFULNESS, AMBITION, PERSISTENCY AND SUCCESS.

Mio-na will cure your dyspepsia or any other stomach trouble by building up the flabby walls and making the stomach so strong that it will digest food without pepsin or other artificial aid.

In other words, Mio-na cures dyspepsia by removing the cause.

T. B. Wallace is the agent for Mio-na in Napanee, and he says to every reader of The Beaver whose stomach is weak, who has indigestion or dyspepsia, that Mio-na is guaranteed to cure or money back.

The price is only 50 cents a large box, and one box is all you need to convince you that you are on the right road to health and happiness.

Mr. Geo. Linder of corner Mill and Park Streets, Elmira, Ont., says: "For about ten years I have been severely troubled with stomach trouble and indigestion so bad that I could not retain my food after eating. I could not eat meat, or scarcely anything and had headaches and constipation. I secured a package of Mio-na with the result that now after having taken two boxes I am entirely cured, and can eat anything digest perfectly and am feeling fine. Mio-na also overcame my constipation. I am only too glad to publicly endorse and recommend Mio-na."

CLEVER STORIES.

In the Family Herald and Weekly Star this week there begins a series of short stories entitled "The Old Homestead," which are very clever. A complete story appears in each week's paper. There are eleven in all. Every paragraph bears traces of laughter and enjoyment. The Family Herald and Weekly Star regularly give a value for one dollar in a whole year's reading of that character. Send to the Family Herald and Weekly Star rarely loses a subscriber, and old subscribers this year are more enthusiastic than ever, so as not to miss a single paper. The Family Herald and Weekly Star becomes more valuable every year, and it should find a place in every Canadian home.

SUCCESSFUL AT HOME.

On October 27th at At Home was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Herrington, in aid of the Organ Fund of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, which was very successful and resulted in a substantial amount being added to the fund. The musical programme was provided and every one seemed to enjoy the social evening. The ever popular home-made candy table proved very attractive and as remunerative. This entertainment was followed a week later by an organ recital in the church. Mr. Phelps, of Belleville, gave a delightful recital as well as to a large and appreciative congregation. His numbers represented the best in music and the brass quartette played the gentlemen showed a complete control of his instrument and handling it with taste and discretion. The returns were satisfactory, for this also was in aid of the Organ Fund of the Guild, under whose auspices these entertainments were held, with to thank all those who kindly took part in the recital as well as all who by their valuable assistance in helping to make both entertainments the success they proved to be.

A WOMAN TO BE PRETTY

Must Have Luxuriant and Glossy Hair, No Matter What Color.

The finest contour of a female face, the sweetest smile of a female mouth, loses something if the head is crowned with scant hair. Scant and falling hair, it is now known, is caused by a parasite that burrows into the scalp to the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality. The little white scales the germ throws up in burrowing are called dandruff. To cure dandruff permanently, then, and to stop falling hair, that germ must be killed. Newbro's Herpicide, an entirely new result of the chemical laboratory, destroys the dandruff germ, and, of course, stops the falling hair, and prevents baldness. Sold by leading druggists. A SPLENDID CONCERT.

The Ladies' Aid of the Western Methodist church are to be congratulated on the success of their annual concert held on Tuesday evening. The concert was largely attended and all came away well pleased with the evening's entertainment. Madame Anna Don Cochrane, the Scottish vocalist, was in excellent form, and her rendering of "Annie Laurie," "Angus Macdonald", "The Ninety and Nine" "The Auld Plaid Shawl," and encores were a treat. She also gave a recitation. Mrs. Aline Gibson gave three recitations, which were well received. Mr. H. E. Collins rendered a violin solo in his usual able and pleasing manner, and Trinity church orchestra added greatly to the interest of the programme. The instrumental trio, rendered by the Misses Paul, deserves special mention, as these young ladies were called upon to fill a place on the programme quite unexpectedly, and did it most charmingly.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON BY REV. DR. LINSCOTT FOR THE INTERNATIONAL NEWSPAPER BIBLE STUDY CLUB FOR NOV. 29th, 1908.

World's Temperance Sunday. — Isaiah xxviii: 7-13.

Golden Text—I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection. 1 Cor. ix: 27.

Do you know of any period in the world's history, anywhere, when strong drink has been a blessing?

Is it at all possible for a people to produce or use strong drink in abundance, and be sober people?

Verse 1.—Upon whom did the prophet say the "woe" of the drunkard would come?

Can a man, no matter how beautiful, or rich, or clever, retain his attractions if he tampers with strong drink?

Upon whom does the curse of strong drink chiefly fall to-day?

How does the curse of strong drink affect women and children to-day?

What proportion of the nation who drink, store away or manufacture liquor?

Verse 2.—Through their drunkenness, the people of Ephraim, were soon conquered and carried into captivity, by the king of Assyria. Is not what is happening to-day which bring "woe" to those who are drunkards?

What are the evils which a moderate drinker has to fear?

Is it possible for a nation of drinkers to permanently prosper?

Verse 3.—How are the drunkards of to-day stricken literally or figuratively, "trodden under foot"?

Verse 4.—The valley of Ephraim was very rich and productive, but because as a "fading flower" through drink; what becomes of the fertile farms in this country which are cultivated by drunkards?

How long does it take for strong drink to consume the "glorious beauty" of either a man or a woman?

Verse 5.—In what way does the Lord become "a crown of glory" and "a diadem of beauty" to those who trust in him for their salvation, and for daily help?

What are the advantages of abstinence from strong drink?

Verse 6.—We need a man who has a just cause, dislike to have it tried before a judge under the influence of drink?

Is a general who drinks a safe man to whom to trust an army?

Should a physician who prefers drinks, be permitted to practice his profession?

Verse 7.—It seems in that day, that the priests and the prophets erred in vision and stumbled in the judgment through strong drink. Have you known of deaths of similar happenings in this day?

Verse 8.—Describe the condition of things in a room after a wine banquet.

Describe the home of a drunkard.

Verse 9.—Why is it so difficult to impart practical knowledge to the people of the unmitigated evils of the drink habit?

What proportion of the voters are now in favor of the total suppression of the manufacture and sale, of strong drink as a beverage?

Verse 10.—In what manner may we plead for the suppression of the ravages of the drink habit? Of what connection must be asserted in settling by members of the club?

Verse 11.—In what way is God to-day unloudly proclaiming the evils of strong drink?

Verses 12-13.—When people are sick or wearied, and will not take the remedy, are what generally is the result?

Lesson for Sunday, Dec. 6th, 1908. Solomon Chooses Wisdom—1 Kings iii: 4-15.

DAYBREAK IN NOVEMBER

Off to the southwest a narrow rim of pale white divides the cloud bank above from the darker earth line below. The upper limbs of the maple, stripped of the leaves of summer, stand out clearly in their gaunt nakedness, while the main branches and trunks are still hidden in the shadows. Presently a new tint appears, indistinct and delicate at first, but gradually becoming clearer and stronger as the sun, like a great shield of polished copper, emerges from beyond the distant hill tops. Slowly the rays extend over the valley and a million points of dazzling whiteness spring into being as the light touches the frosted vegetation on the surface. The birds which still linger in the shelter of the evergreens respond to the call and greet the new-born day, while from a thousand housetops columns of smoke ascend like incense to the goddess of warmth and life.

The night has passed and a new day has begun.

THE PANGS OF SCIATICA.

Can be Cured by the Fair Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Pierce darting pains. Pains like red hot needles being driven through the flesh—in the thigh, perhaps down the legs to the ankles—that's sciatica. None but the victim can realize the torture of this trouble. But the sufferer need not grow discouraged for there is a cure in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills enrich the blood, feed the starved sciatic nerve and thus drives out the pain. Mrs. Joseph L. Brown, Wilmot, N.S., was a victim of sciatica and found a cure in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says:—"For a year I was laid up with sciatica from my side to my foot. What I suffered was at times awful. I could not touch my foot to the floor and had to hobble about with a cane. My right leg was drawn up, and I never expected to have the use of it again. I was attended by our family doctor, and tried several other remedies, but with no benefit, ahh I felt very much discouraged. One day I read the cure of a similar sufferer through Dr Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to try them. I got six boxes, and by the time I had taken them I was completely cured, and have not had the slightest twinge of the trouble since. I am, therefore, a very enthusiastic friend of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and recommend them to all who are similarly troubled."

There is no mystery about the cures Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make. They act upon the blood, enriching and purifying it, and in this way feed the nerves and reach the root of the disease. That is why they cure such common ailments as anaemia, pimples, and anaemia, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, paralysis, and the irregularities in health of growing girls and women. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LETTER TO THE BEAVER.

Wolfsheim, Sask.

The many readers of The Beaver will be pleased to learn that Mr and Mrs. Matthew Hart and family, formerly of Napanee, have arrived safely at their new farm, which is situated just 12 miles from the Wolfsheim postoffice and school house and a mile from a Holiness Movement church. Mr. Hart has bought one quarter-section well improved, and is homesteading another quarter, and can get another quarter as a premium, making a farm of 480 acres, situated just about 5 miles from the new town of Punnichy, on the G.T.P. railway, main line. Also Mr. Hart's eldest son, George, has homesteaded joining his father's farm, and expects to buy an improved farm near by and move in here to live some time in the near future. Then Mr. David Barriger and his eldest son have homesteaded near by and will be coming to these places in the spring.

This is a new country, well adapted to mix farming and unimproved land is selling at, from $10.00 to $15.00 per acre and town lots are selling cheap, and the new town is building up fast. There are a few homesteads to be had yet, but will soon be taken up, as there are good settlers here for one and have some push in them and will work, and are sure to get along well and make good homes for themselves.

J. W. PERRY.

Lord Milner's visit has naturally set going speculation as to the next appointment to the Governor-Generalship. Some say there will be no speculation as to the necessity of the office—that are its functions? What is its use? Lord Elgin came out to launch the re-organized Dominion. He did that work well and as no native Canadian could have done it. But after him what Governor-General has had a single piece of importance, or had anything of importance to do? The office now, in a political point of view, is really a nullity or worse; worse because it serves to veil misdeeds of the party government. The present Governor-General has been compelled to connive by his entire, by the Act of a Provincial Parliament which his Minister of Justice had proclaimed to be "confiscation without compensation." What the social advantages of the court at Ottawa may be, those who do not frequent that court must leave those who do to say.—Weekly Sun.

"Peerless Peninsulars"

Are Cast-Iron Ranges Built Like Steel Ranges

"Peerless Peninsular" Ranges have the Drop Oven and Low Closet which have heretofore been exclusive features of the most expensive steel ranges.

They are also the only ranges made with Fire-Box on right or left side, as may better fit the kitchen in which the range is to be placed.

"Peerless Peninsular" Ranges are splendid cookers, are very economical in regard to fuel, are simply well built, and will give a lifetime of service.

Let us show you their many features of superiority. 72

The Spoilers.
By REX E. BEACH.
Copyright, 1906, by Rex E. Beach.

The men disappeared into the darkness, and when they had gone Glenister closed the window, pulled down the shades and lighted a lamp. He knew by how narrow a margin a tragedy had been averted. If he had fired on these men, his shot would have kindled a feud which would have consumed every vestige of the court crowd and himself among them. He would have fallen under a false banner, and his life would not have reached to the next sunset. Perhaps it was fortfelt now. He could not tell. The vigilantes would probably look upon his part as fruitlessness, and at the very least he had cut himself off from their support, the only support the northland offered him. Henceforth he was a renegade a pariah, hated alike by both factions He purposely avoided sight of Stillman and turned his back when the judge extended his hand with expressions of gratitude. His work was done, and he wished to leave this house. Helen followed them down to the door and as he opened it laid her hand upon his sleeve.

"Words are feeble things, and I can never make amends for all you've done for us."

"For me!" cried Roy, with a break in his voice. "Do you think I sacrificed my honor, betrayed my friends, killed my last hope, ostracized myself, for you? This is the last time I'll trouble you, perhaps the last time I'll see you. No matter what else you've done, however, you've taught me a lesson, and I thank you for it. I have found myself at last. I'm not an Eskimo any longer. I'm a man!"

"You've always been that," she said. "I don't understand as much about this affair as I want to, and it seems to me that no one will explain it. I'm very stupid, I guess. But you won't come back tomorrow and tell it to me?"

"No," he said roughly. "You're not of my people. McNamara and his are to friends of mine, and I'm no friend of theirs. He was half down the steps before she said softly:

"Good night, and God bless you—friend."

She returned to the judge, who was in a pitiable state, and for a long time she labored to soothe him as though he were a child. She undertook to question him about the things which lay uppermost in her mind and which this night had half revealed, but he became fretful and irritated at the mention of mines and mining. She set bedside his bed till he dozed off, puzzling to discover what lay behind the hints she had heard till her brain and body ratched it absolute weariness. The ordeal of the day's excitement sapped her strength till she could barely creep to her own couch, where she rolled and sighed, too tired to sleep at once. She awoke finally, with one last nervous flicker, before complete oblivion took her. A sentence was on her mind—it almost seemed as though she had spoken it aloud:

"The handsomest woman in the north—but Glenister ran away."

CHAPTER XVI.

IT was nearly noon of the next day when Helen awoke to find that McNamara had ridden in from the creek and stopped for breakfast with the judge. He had asked for her, but on hearing the tale of the night's adventure would not allow her to be disturbed. Later he and the judge had gone away together.

Although her judgment approved the step she had contemplated the night before, still the girl now felt a strange reluctance to meet McNamara. It is true that she knew no ill of him except that implied in the accusations of certain embittered men, and she was aware that every strong and aggressive character must possess the imperfections to the qualities which lend him greatness. Nevertheless she was aware of an inner conflict that she had not foreseen. This man who so confidently believed that she would marry him did not dominate her consciousness.

She had ridden much of late, taking long solitary trips beside the shimmering sea that she loved so well or up the winding valleys into the foothills where echoed the roar of swift waters or glinted the flash of shovel blades. This morning her horse was gone, so she determined to walk. In her early rambles she had looked thirstily askance at the rough men she met till she discovered their genuine respect and courtesy. The most unkempt among them were often college bred, although for that matter the roughest of the miners showed abundant consideration for a woman. So she was glad to allow the men to talk to her with the fine freedom inspired by the new country and its wide spaces. The wilderness breeds a chivalry all its own.

Thus there seemed to be no danger abroad, though they had told the girl of mad dogs which roamed the city, explaining that the hot weather affects powerfully the thick coated, shaggy "malamoots." This is the land of the dog, and, whereas in winter his lot is to labor and shiver and starve, in summer he loafs, fights, grows fat and runs mad with the heat.

Helen walked far and, returning, chose an unfamiliar course through the outskirts of the town to avoid meeting any of the women she knew because of that vivid memory of the night before. As she walked swiftly along she thought that she heard faint cries far behind her. Looking up, she noted that it was a lonely, barren quarter and that the only figure in sight was a woman some distance away. A few paces farther on the sounds recurred, more plainly this time, and a gun shot sounded. Glancing back, she saw several men running, one bearing a smoking revolver, and heard nearer still the snarling hubbub of fighting dogs. In a flash the girl's curiosity became horror, for as she watched one of the dogs made a sudden dash through the now subdued group of animals and ran swiftly along the planking on which she stood. It was a handsome specimen of the Eskimo malamoot—tall, gray and coated like a wolf, with the speed, strength and cunning of its cousin. Its head hung low and swung from side to side as it trotted, the motion flecking foam and shiver. The creature had scattered the pack and now, swift, menacing, relentless, was coming toward Helen. There was no shelter near, no fence, no house, and the instant one toward which the other woman was making her way. The men, too far away to protect her, shouted hoarse warnings.

Helen did not scream or hesitate—she turned and ran, terror stricken, toward the distant cottage. She was blind with fright and felt an utter certainty that the dog would attack her before she could reach safety. Yet there was the quick patter of its feet close up behind her. Her knees weakened. The sheltering door was just some yards away. But a horse tethered near the walk reared and snorted as the flying pair drew near. The mad creature swerved, leaped at the horse's legs and snapped in fury. Badly frightened at this attack, the horse lunged at his halter, broke it and galloped away, but the delay had served for Helen, weak and faint, to reach the door. She wrenched at the knob. It was locked. As she turned hopelessly away she saw that the other woman was directly behind her and was, in her turn, awaiting the mad animal's onslaught, but calmly, a tiny revolver in her hand.

"Shoot!" screamed Helen. "Why don't you shoot?" The little gun spoke, the dog spun around, snarling and yelping. The woman fired several times more before it lay still and then reloaded calmly as she "threw" the weapon and ejected the shells:

"The caliber is too small to be good for much."

Helen sank down upon the steps.

"How well you shoot!" she gasped. Her eyes were on the gray bundle whose death agonies had thrust it almost to her feet. The men had run up and were talking excitedly, but after a word with them the woman turned to Helen.

"You must come in for a moment and recover yourself," she said and led her inside.

It was a cozy room in which the girl found herself—more than that, luxurious. There was a piano with scattered music and many of the pretty, feminine things that Helen had not seen since leaving home. The hostess had stepped behind some curtains for an instant and was talking to her from the next room.

That is the third mad dog I have seen this month. Hydrophobia is becoming a habit in this neighborhood." She returned, bearing a tiny silver tray with decanter and glasses.

"You're all unstrung, but this brandy will help you—if you don't object to a swallow of it. Then come right in here and lie down for a moment and you'll be all right." She spoke with such genuine kindness and sympathy that Helen flashed a grateful glance at her. She was tall, slender, and with a peculiar undulating suggestion in her movements, as though she had been bred to the clinging folds of silken garments. Helen watched the clasp of her smile, the friendly solicitude of her expression, and felt her heart warm toward this one kind woman in Nome.

"You're very good," she answered, "but I'm all right now. I was badly frightened. It was wonderful, your saving me." She followed the other's graceful motion as she placed her burden on the table, and in doing so gazed squarely at a photograph of Roy Glenister.

"Oh!" Helen exclaimed and then paused as it flashed over her who this girl was. She looked at her quickly. Yes, probably men would consider the woman beautiful, with that smile. The revelation came with a shock, and she arose, trying to mask her confusion.

"Thank you so much for your kindness. I'm quite myself now and I must go."

Her change of face could not escape the quick perceptions of one schooled by experience in the slights of her sex. Times without number Cherry Malotte had marked that subtle, scornful change in other women, and reviled herself for heeding it. But in some way this girl's manner hurt her worst of all. She betrayed no sign, however, save a widening of the eyes and a certain flashy of smile as she answered:

"I wish you would stay until you are rested, Miss"— She paused with outstretched hand.

"Chester. My name is Helen Chester. I'm Judge Stillman's niece," hurried the other, in embarrassment.

Cherry Malotte withdrew her proffered hand and her face grew hard and hateful.

"Oh! So you are Miss Chester—and I—saved you!" She laughed harshly.

Helen strove for calmness. "I'm sorry you feel that way," she said coolly. "I appreciate your service to me." She moved toward the door.

"Wait a moment. I want to talk to you." Then, as Helen paid no heed, the woman burst out bitterly: "Oh, don't be afraid! I have no desire on committing an unpardonable sin by talking to me, but no one will see you, and by your code the crime has to be being discovered. Therefore, you're quite safe. That's what makes me an outcast—I was found out. I want you to know, however, that, bad as I am, I'm better than you, for I'm loyal to those that like me, and I don't betray my friends."

"I don't pretend to understand you," said Helen coldly.

"Oh, yes, you do! Don't assume such innocence. Of course it's your role, but you can't play it with me." She stepped in front of her visitor, closed the door back against the door, while her face was bitter and mocking. "The little worries I did you just now entitles me to a privilege, I suppose, and I'm going to take advantage of it to tell you how badly your mask fits. Peculiarly rude of me, isn't it? You're in with a fine lot of crooks, and I admire the way you've done your share of the dirty work, but when you assume these scandalized, supervirtuous airs it offends me."

"Let me out!"

"I've done bad things," Cherry continued unheedingly, "but I was forced into them usually, and I never deliberately tried to wreck a man's life just for his money."

"What do you mean by saying that I have betrayed my friends and wrecked anybody's life?" Helen demanded hotly.

"Huh! I had you sized up at the start, but Roy couldn't see it. Then Struve told me what I hadn't guessed. A bottle of wine, a woman, and that fool will tell all he knows. It's a great game McNamara's playing, and he did well to get you in on it, for you're clever, your nerve is good, and your makeup is great for the part. I ought to know, for I've turned a few tricks myself. You'll pardon this little burst of feeling—professional pique. I'm jealous of your ability, that's all. However, now that you realize we're in the same class, don't look down on me hereafter." She opened the door and bowed her guest out with elaborate mockery.

Helen was too bewildered and humiliated to make much out of this sudden and incoherent attack except the fact that Cherry Malotte considered her of a part in this conspiracy which every one seemed to believe existed. Here again was that hint of corruption which she encountered on all sides. This might be merely a woman's jealousy, and yet she said Struve had told her all about it—that a bottle of wine and a pretty face would make the lawyer disclose everything. She could believe it from what she knew and had heard of him. The feeling that she was groping in the dark, that she was wrapped in a mysterious woof of secrecy, came over her again as it had so often of late. If Struve talked to that other woman, why wouldn't he talk to her? She paused, changing her direction toward Front street, revolving rapidly in her mind as she went the course of action. Cherry Malotte believed her to be an actress. Very well, she would prove her judgment right.

She found Struve busy in his private office, but he leaped to his feet on her entrance and came forward, offering her a chair.

"Good morning, Miss Helen. You have a fine color, considering the night you passed. The Judge told me all about the affair, and let me state that you're the plucki[est] girl I know."

She smiled grimly at the thought of what made her cheeks glow and languidly loosened the buttons of her jacket.

"I suppose you're very busy, you lawyer men?" she inquired.

"Yes, but not too busy to attend to anything you want."

"Oh, I didn't come on business," she said lightly. "I was out walking and merely sauntered in."

"Well, I appreciate that all the more," he said in an altered tone, twisting his chair about. "I'm more than delighted." She judged she was getting on well from the way his professionalism had dropped off.

"Yes, I got tired of calling to uncle and Mr. McNamara. They treat me as though I were a little girl."

"When do you take the fatal step?"

"What step do you mean?"

"Your marriage. When does it occur? You needn't blush," he added, "McNamara told me about it a month ago."

He felt his thrust gingerly at the thought, but his eyes brightened when she answered lightly:

"I think you are mistaken. He must have been joking."

For some time she led him on adroitly. Letting off many things by the way to make him wonder at her new and flippant humor. He had never considered she could be this—so tantalizingly close to familiarity and yet so mandelisly aloof and distant. He grew bolder in his gallantry.

"How are things going with us?" she questioned as his warmth grew pronounced. "I'm sure you won't tell, and Mr. McNamara is as close mouthed as can be lately."

He looked at her quickly. "In what respect?"

She summoned up her courage and wished past the ragged edge of uncertainty.

"Now, don't you try to keep me in short dresses too. It's getting warm, some. I've done my part, and I want to know what the rest of you are doing." She was prepared for any answer.

"What do you want to know?" he asked cautiously.

"Everything. Don't you think I can bear a little of the responsibility?"

"Guess it's it! Well, don't you pay any attention to what people say."

She recognized her mistake and continued hurriedly:

"Why shouldn't I? Aren't we all in this together? I object to being used and then discarded. I think I'm entitled to know how the scheme is working. Don't you think I can keep my mouth shut?"

"Of course," he laughed, trying to change the subject of their talk. But she arose and leaned against the desk near him, vowing that she would not leave the office without learning some part of this mystery. His manner strengthened her suspicion that there was something behind it all. This disjointed, brilliant creature knew the situation thoroughly, and yet, though served by her, she must be remained chained by curiosity. She leaned forward and smiled at him.

"You're like the others, aren't you? You won't give me any satisfaction at all."

"Give, give, give," said Struve cynically. "That's always the woman's cry. Give me this—give me that. Selfish sex! Why don't you ever something in return? Men are traders; women usurers. You are curious; hence miserable. I can help you, therefore I should do it for a smile. You ask me to break my promises and risk my honor on your caprice. Well, that's womanlike, and I'll do it. I'll put myself in your power, but I won't do it gratis. Can we'll trade."

"It isn't curiosity," she denied indignantly; "it is my due."

"No, you don't need the common talk and grown suspicious, that's all. You think I know something that will throw a new light on a great shadow on everything you have in the world, and you're worked up to such a condition that you're willing to pay me—people's word; and, on the other hand, you can't go to strangers, so you come to me. Suppose I told you I had the papers you brought to me last spring in that safe and that they told the whole story—whether your shadow is unimpeachable or whether he deserved hanging by that nob—what would you do, eh? What would you give to see them? Well, they're there and ready to speak for themselves. If you're a woman you won't rest till you've seen them. Will you trade?"

"Yes, yes! Give them to me," she cried exactly, at which a wave of crimson rushed up to his eyes and he rose abruptly from his chair. He made toward her, but she retreated to the wall, pale and wide eyed.

"Can't you see," she flung at him, "that I trust in you?"

He paused. Of course I can, but I want a kiss to seal the bargain—to clinch our account." He reached for her hand with his own but one, but she pushed him away and slipped past him toward the door.

"Quit yourself," said he, "but if I'm [ed] tabulous you'll never rest till you've seen these papers. I've studied you, and I'd place a bet that you can't worry McNamara or look your uncle in the eye till you know the truth. You might do either if you knew them to be crooks, but you couldn't if you only suspected it that's the woman. When you get ready, come back. I'll show you proof, because I don't claim to be anything but what I am—Wilton Struve, barrister of some mean ability. When they come to inscribe my headstone I hope they can carve these on with truth, 'He got value received'."

"You're a panther," she said loathingly.

"Graceful and elegant brute, that," he laughed. "Affectionate and full of play, but with sharp teeth and slipper claws. To follow out the idea, which pleases me, I believe the creature owes no loyalty to its fellows, and hunts alone. Now, when you've followed this conspiracy out and placed the blame where it belongs, won't you come and tell me about it? That door leads into an outer hall which opens into the street. No one will see you come or go."

As she hurried along she wondered dazedly why she had stayed to listen so long. What a monster he was! His meaning was plain, had always been so from the first day he laid eyes on her, and he was utterly conscienceless. She had known all this; and yet, in her proud, youthful confidence, and in her need, every hour more desperate and urgent, to know the truth, she had dared risk herself with him. Withal, the man was shrewd and observant and had divined her mental condition with remarkable sagacity. She had failed with him; but the girl now knew that she could never rest till she found an answer to her questions. She must kill this suspicion that ate into her so. She thought tenderly of her uncle's goodness to her, clung with despairing faith to the last of her kin. The blood ties of the Chesters were close and she felt in dire need of that lost brother who was somewhere in this mysterious land—need of some one in whom ran the strain that bound her to the weak old man up yonder. There was McNamara; but how could he help her, how much did she know of him, this man who was now within the darkest shadow of her new suspicions?

Feeling almost intolerably friendless and alone, weakened both by her recent fright and by her encounter with Struve, Helen considered as calmly as her emotions would allow and decided that this was no day in which pride should figure. There were facts which it was imperative she should know, and immediately; therefore, a few minutes later, she knocked at the door of Cherry Malotte.

DAYS OF DIZZINESS

COME TO MANY NAPANEE PEOPLE.

There are days of dizziness, spells of drowsiness, headache, sideache, backache.

Sometimes rheumatic pain after urinary trouble.

You are plainly told that the Kidneys are sick.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure all Kidney ills.

Mrs. Benjamin Johnson, of Robert St., Napanee, Ont., says:

"Headaches were frequent and usually accompanied by spells of dizziness and spots before the eyes. I would be scarcely able to walk across the floor at times and would have to support myself to keep from falling. My back was weak and a dull, bearing down pain settled across the small of it, and in the region of the kidneys. I would be more tired and done out on waking than on going to bed at it. I was restless and would get but little sleep. Hooth's Kidney Pills were recommended and procuring a box at Mr. Wallace's Pharmacy I commenced treatment. I soon found relief and it was but a short time until I was well and strong again and I have felt better in every way."

Chronic Cough

Kingston, Ontario, Mother Tells How Her Son Was Cured of a Bad Cough and Run-down Condition by Vinol.

"My son, Edward Lennon, after taking two bottles of Vinol has been thoroughly cured of a bad cough that he had for nearly two years. He was much run-down and had lost his appetite. Vinol not only cured his cough but it built him up and greatly increased his appetite. I believe Vinol to be a splendid tonic." Hannah Lennon, 149 Raglan Road, Kingston, Ontario.

This is because Vinol is a genuine tonic and body-builder which contains peptonate of iron together with every one of the body-building medicinal elements of cod liver oil, but without one drop of oil to upset the stomach and retard its work. Vinol acts directly upon the stomach, creates a healthy appetite, and enables the digestive organs to obtain the necessary elements from the food eaten to make rich, red blood, healthy flesh and muscle tissue and create strength.

Guide—What do you think of that? Isn't it a magnificent view?

Miss Blakely—I must confess my disappointment. But then (apologetically) I've seen postals of the place, you know.

Patience—How did the recital of Pegay's engagement get out? She didn't want it known yet.

Patience—Why, she didn't have to announce it. The bed fell through the floor.

"Still yourself," said he, "but if I'm [ed] tabulous you'll never rest till you've seen these papers. I've studied you, and I'd place a bet that you can't worry McNamara or look your uncle in the eye till you know the truth. You might do either if you knew them to be crooks, but you couldn't if you only suspected it that's the woman. When you get ready, come back. I'll show you proof, because I don't claim to be anything but what I am—Wilton Struve, barrister of some mean ability. When they come to inscribe my headstone I hope they can carve these on with truth, 'He got value received'."

"You're a panther," she said loathingly.

"Graceful and elegant brute, that," he laughed. "Affectionate and full of play, but with sharp teeth and slipper claws. To follow out the idea, which pleases me, I believe the creature owes no loyalty to its fellows, and hunts alone. Now, when you've followed this conspiracy out and placed the blame where it belongs, won't you come and tell me about it? That door leads into an outer hall which opens into the street. No one will see you come or go."

As she hurried along she wondered dazedly why she had stayed to listen so long. What a monster he was! His meaning was plain, had always been so from the first day he laid eyes on her, and he was utterly conscienceless. She had known all this; and yet, in her proud, youthful confidence, and in her need, every hour more desperate and urgent, to know the truth, she had dared risk herself with him. Withal, the man was shrewd and observant and had divined her mental condition with remarkable sagacity. She had failed with him; but the girl now knew that she could never rest till she found an answer to her questions. She must kill this suspicion that ate into her so. She thought tenderly of her uncle's goodness to her, clung with despairing faith to the last of her kin. The blood ties of the Chesters were close and she felt in dire need of that lost brother who was somewhere in this mysterious land—need of some one in whom ran the strain that bound her to the weak old man up yonder. There was McNamara; but how could he help her, how much did she know of him, this man who was now within the darkest shadow of her new suspicions?

Feeling almost intolerably friendless and alone, weakened both by her recent fright and by her encounter with Struve, Helen considered as calmly as her emotions would allow and decided that this was no day in which pride should figure. There were facts which it was imperative she should know, and immediately; therefore, a few minutes later, she knocked at the door of Cherry Malotte.

The Norfolk ...Suit...

Our Boys' Department is full to overflowing with the newest ideas from the W. R. Johnston Co., the best makers of Boys' Clothing in Canada.

Foremost among our favorite styles stand our Norfolk suits. The materials were selected for their wear-resisting and shape-retaining qualities; are all-wool, thoroughly sponged and shrunken, look good and will wear as well as they look. All seams are stitched twice with strong thread, felled and taped.—There are no weak points in our Boys' Suits, as at every joint where strain is possible, the garment is reinforced and made doubly strong.

It will pay you to see our splendid lines before you fit your boy out with his new suit for fall. Norfolk or double-breasted coat suits in sizes for boys from 8 to 15 years of age—$3.00, $4.00, $5.00, $6.00 and up to $7.50.

If you have never tested our sort of Boys' Clothes you have certainly been missing the best.

Boys' Reefers.

The reefer is always the boys' ideal garment. Our reefers are well made and trimmed. All sizes, 4 years up—$2.50, $3.00 and $3.50.

Boys' Sweaters.

The most useful garment you can buy a boy for school wear. We have a large range of patterns and the best wearing sweaters made—50c, 75c and $1.00.

Boys' Overcoats.

In every wanted and worthy style, and our prices are very moderate.

Mothers, bring you boys to us—all sizes — $3.50, $5.00, $6.00 and $7.00.

Mothers will find this store one of the very best in this section to buy all kinds of boys' wearables, as we carry a large assortment of Hats, Caps, Gloves, Mitts, Underwear, good strong Hose, Sweaters, Print Shirts and Shirt Waists, Collars, Ties, etc., etc. If you are not acquainted with our store and straightforward methods of doing business, it will pay you to investigate, as we carry a large and well assorted stock and our prices the lowest—quality considered.

Two old fashioned fire places in the office and smoking room are being fitted with gas logs and new furniture while the bath room is being refinished and painted. Another improvement decided upon is the fitting up of one of the large rooms for pool and billiards, and in a few days these will be ready for use. ENJOYABLE LECTURE.

[illegible] STRATTON [illegible] ASTRONOMY [illegible] ILLUSTRATIONS.

[illegible] Astronomical [illegible] Stratton [illegible] Tuesday [illegible] Public [illegible] years. He [illegible] at some length [illegible] ancient [illegible] time [illegible] the time in a [illegible] subject that made the explanations most instructive.

TRANSIT CIRCLE ROOM.

Dr. Stratton then passed on to a description of the transit circle room in which there is a large telescope mounted like a gun on trunnions through which two observations of the stars are taken. On the wall [illegible] that room many discoveries had been made.

The chronometer rooms were in another part most interesting. In them are regulated and kept going the chronometers belonging to His Majesty's ships. In the rest of the two rooms there are two clocks of great importance one [illegible] of mean and the other solar time.

Two more rooms visiting the wonderful buildings the interest of the great dome would prove the most interesting feature of the Observatory. [illegible] under the revolving dome [illegible] through which observations [illegible] are made. The round aperture [illegible] at the same rate as the earth. But the opposite side [illegible] and the observer can [illegible] the passage of the stars. To [illegible] a large telescope which the telescope was directed and as the attachment [illegible] to take observations [illegible] to be stated the observatory was built upon the summit of a hill 154 feet above the level of the sea, and was at the centre of all the winds.

The [illegible] Observatory, situated in Old Deer Park, was well known [illegible] to his visitors as being the [illegible] chronometer was [illegible] tested and a watch with a box [illegible] which the speaker regarded, could be absolutely relied upon as a time keeper.

THE HISTORY OF ASTRONOMY.

The second part of Dr. Stratton's lecture was taken up with a short but highly instructive history of astronomy, which he spoke of as referred to as the science of the motion of the celestial bodies. It origin amongst all nations was [illegible] antiquity but it was evident that the first [illegible] people of man must naturally have been to study the sky, the rising and setting of the stars, and their relation to the seasons.

The speaker showed that in India the earliest civilized part of the Old World, the people of the early days were deeply versed in the science, especially the [illegible] of the body places. Scientists had stated that the Hindoos had transmitted to mod[illegible] ern people observations taken earlier than 2000 B.C. The astronomical law laid down by the Vedas for the arrangement of the Calendar most necessarily date back to the fourteenth century before Christ.

To the Chinese the earliest information which had any claim to exactitude was due. Dr. Stratton stated that in the time of the Emperor Yao, 2000 B.C., astronomy was made a special study in China. The Chinese at that time represented the vault of the firmament by a sphere divided into sections with the earth in the centre and with the sun, the moon, the planets and the stars in the places assigned them in the Ptolemean system. They constructed instruments for measuring and [illegible] regular distances of the stars and ascertained that the solar year was [illegible] six hours longer than 365 days. They were also acquainted with the use of the dial and measured time by the aid of the clepsydra, (water clock.)

THE CHALDEANS.

The speaker passed on to take up the observations in astronomy made by the Chaldeans which dated back, it is said, to nine centuries before Alexander the Great made his entrance into Babylon in 331 B.C. The Chaldeans were acquainted with the ancient planets, possessed a zodiac divided into twelve constellations and a sphere which has served as a model for what is now in use. From them the knowledge of astronomy passed into Phoenicia and Egypt. The observations made by the Egyptians of the motion around the sun of the planets, showed how advanced they were in this direction, and their priests were more particularly renowned. They divided the heavens into constellations and constructed a zodiac which was thought to have been in existence earlier than 2500 B.C.

Among the Greeks the first famous Greek astronomer was Thales, of Miletus, who founded the Ionian school in which he taught the spherical shape of the earth, the obliquity of the ecliptic, and the causes which superintended the eclipses of the sun and moon. After him came Anaximander who was credited with the invention of the dial, the terrestrial globe and geographical charts, and Pythagoras, who in 500 B.C. expounded two distinct motions of the earth, one upon its own axis and the other around the sun.

Dr. Stratton referred briefly to Pythias, Aristarchus of Samos, Aristotle, Hipparchus, and Ptolemy, famous astronomers of the olden days and lead up to Copernicus, Tycho-Brahe, Descartes and Newton, the last the most illustrious of all English savant. He explained the theories and discoveries made by each in a most interesting manner.

At the conclusion of his lecture a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Dr. Stratton, on motion of Hon. J. R. Stratton, seconded by Rev. J. C. Potter. Both speakers expressed the thanks of the audience to Dr. Stratton for his most entertaining lecture.

Before the meeting dispersed, Dr. Marsh gave a few explanations illustrated by drawings of the blackboard of new features in astronomical work that have been discovered lately.

On motion of Hon. J. R. Stratton, seconded by Mr. T. A. S. Hay, a vote of thanks was passed to the Board of Education for their generous permission to the Society for the use of the Collegiate Institute for meeting purposes.

The date for the next meeting has not yet been decided upon.

WHAT IS ITCH DIRT?

It is the old Anglo-Saxon name for Dandruff and is a good one. If you have dandruff you have itch dirt and the little microbes that are part and parcel of dandruff are working persistently night and day and sooner or later will bring the very life to our hair and destroy its vitality.

Then you'll be bald! Said to-day but not even the wonderful nutritious properties in Parisian Sage can grow hair after the hair bulb is dead. Parisian Sage cures Dandruff, T. B. Wallace, the druggist, sells it to-day and it is guaranteed to [illegible] only 50 cents a bottle and your money back if it fails to cure Dandruff, Falling Hair and Itchiness of the Scalp.

The Editor of The Beaver:

Dear Mr. Editor—I see my subscription for The Beaver has now expired. Please find enclosed a postal note for $2.00, for which please send the The Beaver for another two years. I believe this is the correct amount. If not kindly forward me paper accordingly.

It may interest some of your readers if I give you a few facts concerning the great herring fishing which is in full swing here at present, and will be for the next two months.

First, these British herring fishermen are a different type of men altogether to the class of men whom we in Canada are accustomed to associate with this industry.

They are, in 50 per cent. of the cases, fine, intelligent, well educated men, and in the case of the Scotch fishermen especially, are in many cases men worth from $5000.00 to $15,000.00 each. In many cases the whole family hold shares in their fishing steamer, which is usually worth from $15,000.00 to $20,000.00 including their nets. Of course there is also a large percentage of poor men amongst them. Many on the other hand have a shareowner for a partner, probably holding a third share or a half.

In good seasons it is a frequent occurance for one of these to go out at night and return in the morning with a catch worth from $250.00 to $1250.00. Some on the other hand often fish a week and only make $100.00. Often have they during this last week made $1,000.00 in two nights. Their expenses are very heavy, however, and in bad weather I have often seen them lose their whole fleet of nets in a night. These are worth from $1000 to $1500 a fleet. So you can see it is not all gold that glitters. These steamers when they go to sea put out nets which reach a mile to a mile and a quarter from the steamer, and extend down into the sea about 7 fathoms or 42 feet.

Each steamer carries a crew of 9 men, and a boy as cook.

At present there are 875 of these steamers about off here and their [illegible] are in hard cash as upon [illegible] $15,000,000 to $20,000,000. Think of it, fifteen million dollars! The value of the British fishing fleet is as round numbers $20,000,000.

The Scotch fishermen as a class do not go to sea on Sunday for conscience sake, and the result is that during about 15 per cent. and a [illegible] which they admit true, that the Scotch fishermen nearly all own their own boats, nets, and in many cases their own steamers. Of course them, it is true, are mortgaged more or less, but the fact remains that they hold these in their own names, not as a farmer in Canada holds his farm in his own name, though in no other country in the world is the home more entirely free from encumbrance. Every Scotch fisherman owns a part of the outfit on each craft.

The English fishermen, with a rare exception, notwithstanding the fact that he goes to sea every day in the week, never has boat, net or home to his name. These are owned by capitalists. At the very outside there are not 10 in 100 who have anything in the world beyond a few household goods. It is a startling object lesson, looking at it from the financial side alone, to the world, as to whether it pays an industry, country, or individual, to obey the Divine command to rest one day in seven.

A year or two ago I pointed this out in a letter to one of the English papers, when an old atheist, a magistrate, rushed into print and declared it was not true, because he dredged he was a fish salesman and sold for Scotch boats, and found they were no more prosperous, than the others. He did not know, however, that I happened to be in a position to know that out of 1160 Scotch boats, he only sold for 12, and these were from a port of Scotland where you have to watch the natives when doing business. They are noted as being as the Scotch say "fly." All from one place and the worst type of men I ever pointed out to him that he only sold for 12 of these out of 1100, and was in no position to speak with authority, and asked him where a list of English boats could be found, registered in the crews name as were the Scotch? If the old rascal didn't go and quote volume, chapter and page from book after book, showing how the Scotch kept the Sabbath 200 years ago, but never a page did he quote showing boats registered in the English fishermen's names. They did not exist.

Many of the English crews, however, are more striving to get the courage to allow them to remain in port on Sunday as they see that even from the financial standpoint they are no better off, and besides they feel the need sorely of rest.

Some of these English skippers, however, are to be reckoned among the bravest of the brave when a gale comes to help another fellow. One of them out of Lowestoft, 2 miles south of here, came across a Dutch logger water-logged, and with the crew lashed to the rigging in a terrific gale. It was miles out of here. He ran his little steamer up to the wreck, but the most Dutch men were so frozen that they could not tie the lines to themselves which the Englishmen threw at them. The captain of the steamer then lowered his mate, tied a line to himself, jumped into the sea, and swam to the wreck, tied the line to man after man, until he had four safely on board, when they were hauled in. Unfortunately he brought the two vessels together and tore the stem that part of the boat to which the [illegible] of the vessel are fastened out of his own vessel. She began to fill. He jumped into the sea, hauled aboard, and by almost superhuman efforts blocked up the leak with sail cloth and leaves. He saw he was in danger of sinking, and dare not wait longer, so with an aching heart he turned round and steered for Lowestoft, with the plumb-[illegible] dear life. He said it made his heart ache to steam off in the black [illegible] of the night and hear the other two poor Dutchmen to drown, but he could not do otherwise, as he was 50 miles from land in a howling gale with his vessel filling every minute. Happily he ran his [illegible] into Lowestoft she was almost level with water forward, and he could only get her into the harbor, and she beached her outside. It was a miracle that the shelter bulkheads stood, or the two would have been extinguished and all lost. Bravery on the battlefield is not in [illegible] such deeds as these, yet it often happening here.

To illustrate how [illegible] things as these are [illegible] an incident which [illegible] as I had finished the [illegible] bed I was awakened [illegible] blooming of the distress [illegible] ing out the lifeboat [illegible] ship in distress off [illegible] rockets were fired [illegible] sell, and also by the [illegible] the tremendous [illegible] the whole town and [illegible] in the place [illegible] dressed and went [illegible] weird sight I never [illegible] The ship herself, [illegible] steamer, was [illegible] the coastguards and [illegible] firing red rockets [illegible] the ship to indicate [illegible] which were two miles [illegible] ection in which the [illegible] could reach her [illegible]

As the lifeboats [illegible] also fired green [illegible] ection of the ship [illegible] crews know that [illegible] now on the way. [illegible] may seem yet a [illegible] six residents of [illegible] trouble to go out [illegible] was needed. [illegible] with myself, however. The reason [illegible] is that it happens [illegible] they are scattered [illegible] it entirely to respond to these [illegible] case the ship [illegible] which she had [illegible] rose, so that the [illegible] ease. After [illegible] running parallel [illegible] Woolsthorpe [illegible] Aberdeen [illegible] being waited [illegible] opening sight [illegible] Aberdeen [illegible] target about [illegible] 10 miles away [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

SCALDED BY BOILING FAT.

Couldn't Use Hand For a Month.

ZAM-BUK GAVE INSTANT RELIEF.

An accident in a Toronto home might have had very serious consequences had it not been for Zam-Buk. Miss Martha Green, of 9 Claremont St., in taking a pan of boiling fat from the stove spilt it over her right hand. "The boiling fat ran into the palm of my hand," she says, "and over all my fingers. It was almost cold with the pain. The hand became swollen, and large blisters formed all over the palm and along the fingers. For over a month I was unable to use the hand at all. I tried several kinds of salves and liniments, but the wound seemed apparently no better. Then after I had gather too severe for these preparations to heal.

About this time I was advised to try Zam-Buk. I stopped using all other preparations and applied it instead. The very first application soothed my hand and seemed to draw out the fire and inflammation, and as I kept on using Zam-Buk the blisters gradually dried up and disappeared. In a very short time the scald was healed completely.

This is but one instance of the uses to which Zam-Buk can be so advantageously applied. It is equally effective for burns, cuts, bruises, abrasions, sprains and stiffness. It also cures eczema, ulcers, blood poisoning, ringworm, scalp sores, chronic wounds, blackheads, pimples, cold sores, chapped hands, and all skin diseases and injuries. Rubbed well on to the chest in cases of cold, it relieves the aching and tightness, and applied as an embrocation it cures rheumatism and neuralgia, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for receipt of price. 3 boxes for $1.25.

Refer to the richness of the blood. If you are pale and thin, you are poor. If strength and nerve power be lacking, you are driven away thinner and paler, and brings rich blood and nerve power to you.

MOI STAIN GROVE.

On Saturday afternoon, Nov. 14th, a gloom was cast over this vicinity, when the news spread of the death of Mrs. Nancy Clark, after an illness of about four months. Mrs. Clark was born in Brighton 69 years ago. She was married to Mr. Nelson Clark about thirty years ago, when she came to Ameliasburg where she resided until about two years ago, when she removed near Mountain Grove Township of Olden, where she remained until the time of her death. Her husband predeceased her seven years ago, and since that time she has been with her sister. The fall upon a stone was one of the heads of the household has been removed for there was born seven children, seven which survive her, six of which remain at home.—Mr. Williams, Cecil, John, Lina, Effie, and Gladys.—Another fatality has occurred in the solemnity is that two of the daughters are past recovering from typhoid fever, and the worst is feared, as one is the other mother's funeral. Mrs. Clark was a consistent member of the Methodist church, Arden, and during the time of her illness she has up with much Christian fortitude and grace as would encourage any one who came in contact with it. As the writer visited her from time to time, he has often heard her express the hope she longed to be away, her only care being that of leaving her girls, which she loved dearly, especially the youngest being only 12 years old. The funeral services were conducted in Arden Methodist church by G. F. Pinkerton, assisted by Rev. Messrs. Reeds, Dixon, Tamworth, and Gilbert, Arden. Her many friends were overcome by one of the ladies of Arden singing, "I am coming home," and the remains were placed in Arden vault to await interment. The family have the sympathy of all.

Hold thou the cross before us closing eyes;
Shine through the gloom and point us to the skies;
Heaven's morning breaks and earth's vain shadows flee;

DEATH OF MISS CARSON.

The news of the death of one of Napanee's most estimable young ladies in the person of Miss Artie M Carson was received with profound regret on Friday evening, when it was learned that she had died in the Kingston General Hospital after an illness of six weeks. About three months ago deceased went to the hospital to take a course as nurse in training, and in waiting on a typhoid fever patient she unfortunately contracted the disease which was the cause of her early death. The family were called to her bedside on Tuesday and remained until the end. Miss Carson was a member of the Presbyterian church, where she will be greatly missed. Her short stay at Kingston won for her many friends and all through her illness, being hourly attended to by every loved. Services were held in the hospital on Friday and also before leaving for Napanee, and was attended by the staff of nurses and doctors as well as by the Board of Governors. Expressions of sympathy were freely expressed by the young ladies' co-workers in that institution, as they had learned to love her for her many sterling qualities and gentleness of manner. The remains were brought to Napanee on the midnight train Friday night and remained here until Sunday. Services were held by Rev. J. R. Cohu, at the family residence West St., on Monday morning, thence by 10.27 a.m. train to Picton, where the remains were interred in Glenwood cemetery. The burial service was held by Rev. Mr. Cohu, assisted by Rev. Mr. Emory, of Picton. Besides the parents she leaves a sister, Miss Edna Carson, to mourn the loss of a fond daughter and sister. The family have the sincere sympathy of their many friends.

VISIT OF THE BISHOP OF ONTARIO.

The Rt. Rev. Dr. Lennox Mills, Lord Bishop of the Diocese, visited St. Mary Magdalene's church, Napanee, on Sunday, Nov. 15th, and brought joy and strength to the hearts of the congregation. In the morning he ordered the Apostolic Rite of Confirmation or the Laying on of Hands, to twenty persons, eight men and twelve women, all of adult age. All the newly confirmed received their first communion. There were 140 communicants at this service. In the afternoon the Bishop privately confirmed an old man of 82, who was prevented by sickness from going to church. In the evening another very large congregation filled the spacious church. The choir, numbering over 40, are to be congratulated on the splendid service which they rendered. The Bishop preached one of the most forceful and eloquent sermons ever heard in Napanee. His Lordship is always received with enthusiasm wherever he goes, but on this occasion he surpassed himself, and his regular annual visitation next spring is eagerly looked forward to.

OLIVE OIL—

Eating Olive Oil is a growing and sane idea. Olive Oil is becoming one of the important foods of the world. Its value lies in the fact that it is all nutrition and that it is the only fat-like potion so harmful to the system that results from using other foods (except the Olive Oil) you eat. Be careful about the Quality only. We handle a special brand that is not only pure, but of a delicious flavor.

DEATH OF MISS CARSON.

The news of the death of one of Napanee's most estimable young ladies in the person of Miss Artie M. Carson, was received with profound regret on Friday evening, when it was learned that she had died in the Kingston General Hospital, after an illness of two weeks. About three months ago she went to the hospital to take a course in nurses' training, and in waiting on a typhoid fever patient she unfortunately contracted the disease which was the cause of her early death. The family were called to her bedside on Tuesday and remained until the end. Miss Carson was a member of the Presbyterian church, where she will be greatly missed. Her short stay at Kingston was full many friends, and all though her illness lasting hands attended to her every need. Notice was sent to the hospital on Friday night before leaving for Napanee, and was attended by the staff of nurses and doctors as well as by the Board of Governors. Expressions of sympathy were freely expressed by the young Ladies' co-workers in that institution. The remains were brought to Napanee on the midnight train Friday night and remained here until Monday. Service was held by Rev. J. R. Cook, at the family residence, West st., on Monday morning; thence by 10.27 a.m. train to Picton, where the remains were interred in Glenwood cemetery. The burial service was held by Rev. Mr. Cody, assisted by Rev. Mr. Emory, of Picton. Besides the parents she leaves a sister, Miss Etta Carson, to mourn the loss of a loving daughter and sister. The family have the sincere sympathy of their many friends.

Teas may come, and teas may go, but "Salada" goes on—slowly, but surely winning its way into the homes of millions of satisfied users.

VISIT OF THE BISHOP OF ONTARIO.

The Rt. Rev. Dr. Lennox Mills, Lord Bishop of the Diocese, visited St. Mary Magdalene's church, Napanee, on Sunday, Nov. 15th, and brought joy and strength to the hearts of the congregation. In the morning he administered the Apostolic Rite of Confirmation or the Laying on of Hands to twenty persons, eight men and twelve women, all of adult age. All the newly confirmed received their first communion. There were 140 communicants at this service. In the afternoon the Bishop privately confirmed an old man of 82, who was prevented by sickness from going to church. In the evening another very large congregation filled the spacious church. The choir, numbering over 60, are to be congratulated on the splendid service which they rendered. The Bishop preached one of the most forceful and eloquent sermons ever heard in Napanee. His Lordship is always received with enthusiasm wherever he goes, but on this occasion he surpassed himself, and his regular annual visitation next spring is eagerly looked forward to.

WASHING WITHOUT WATER

Is Like Trying to Get Rid of Dandruff Without Herpicide.

Did you ever see any one trying to wash themselves without soap or water?

If you did what could you say of him?

It is every bit as foolish to try to get rid of dandruff and to prevent Baldness by feeding the germs which cause it with Oxychloride Vaseline Glycerine and similar substances which form the principal ingredients of most so-called Hair growers.

Newbro's Herpicide is successful because it attacks and kills the parasitic germ which feeds on the hair roots. There is no other genuine Herpicide manufactured.

Send 10c. to Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich., for sample. Send 50c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

PUBLIC HEALTH NOTICE

SMALLPOX

The attention of the public is hereby called to the prevalence of Smallpox in the city of Toronto, and to the precautions to be taken against the spread of the contagion in this municipality. The Board of Health wishes to give notice that no person out of doors should be exercised in visiting the infected houses, and as a further precautionary measure the Board would also request that all those who have not been vaccinated in recent years be vaccinated without delay.

BOIL THE WELL WATER

The Board of Health also wishes to call the attention of the public to the fact that many wells in the city are contaminated and the water is totally unfit for use without boiling, as typhoid fever is liable to be spread by the use of such water. Physicians in the practice of the Public Health Act in all cases of Typhoid fever must be reported. I have just placed a large Agate and Tinware to my stock of China Glassware and Fancy Goods. When you need any goods call and see me before you purchase elsewhere, as I shall be pleased to show you the goods. I solicit your patronage, and thank all for past favors.

CHRISTMAS.

Say, it's gettin' 'round to Christmas,
The crops is in an' all,
We're nearly into winter
We're almost out of fall.

I'm awful fond of Christmas,
I'm fond of it—great
When the puddin's in the kettle
An' the turkey's on yer plate.

It's awful hard awaitin',
An' specially that last night
When you're wishin', wishin', wishin'
Christmas Day would just get light.

There ain't no time like Christmas
For fun an' frolic an'
An' there's some appreciates it—
Cent, perhaps, it is a boy.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON BY REV. DR. LINSCOTT FOR THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY-SCHOOL BIBLE STUDY CLUB FOR DEC. 6th, 1908.

Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.

Solomon Chooses Wisdom.—I Kings iii.: 5-15.

Golden Text.—The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. Prov. ix.:10.

Verse 4. What is the chief dependence of a king and a citizen?

What was the great question Solomon asked? Was it the answer God, or Jehovah-Jireh, a spirit of guidance to lead him how and what he should pray?

What are the chief benefits to the rulers, of duties given by the church, to ministers and to the people?

Which is the richer man and the one who has lived the most righteous life who died leaving no estate, or the one who died leaving a large estate of business and leaving down many particulars of nothing but a name?

Verse 5. Some students of dreams, as Solomon had, counsel us in these days to be particular minded people?

How could Solomon distinguish this dream from an ordinary dream?

Does God still give his children a choice as to what they would like, or does he choose for them?

If God does not choose for his children, does he influence them in the choice, and how is the difference in the two supposed methods?

Verse 6. What help is it to us, to be able to praise God for the lives of our parents and mothers?

Is it not probable that our fathers and mothers, on the other side, look back and see their sons and daughters here, and take pleasure in their prosperity?

Verse 7. What is meant by "coming in," signing the hand of God, in putting us into a position of responsibility?

Is a young man ever hearted, and is true humility, encouraging mark of greatness?

Verse 8. What are "chosen people"?

Is there wisdom in prayers that ask for more wisdom and not greatness, to take of wisdom and not greatness, to take of wisdom and God will give us riches, other treasures and honor without our asking? (See Matt. vi. 33.) This question must be answered by the members of the class.

Will every true Canadian have in his heart a desire that the God of the Empire will bless to its power in the Dominion, and that we, as individuals, may be made so strong and true as to be a blessing to others?

Verse 9. What is meant by "understanding heart"?

Why do not all parents ask for good

Dealness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Best Flour, Datoe's Nonesuch, Datoe's Manitoba Patent

By numerous tests by the best bakers the above mentioned grades have been proven to be the best flours in the market.

When buying flour, ask for Datoe's, and guarantee your home mill thereby producing lean and Shorts that you can purchase cheaper than the product of the Western mills, which has to be transported those ands of miles on a grain rate, and you get when it reaches you a poor article.

The great popularity of the former of the mentioned brands—Datoe's—is a sufficient guide for us to guarantee that the latter is just as good, but be sure and ask your dealer to buy flour from mills hundreds of miles away, and who you an inferior flour for more money than you can purchase the best product for, if value is the object we guarantee.

HISTORICAL MEETING

Prof. Morrison addressed a small gathering in the Historical Society Hall on Friday evening last. His subject was Sir Walter Raleigh, and his treatment of it was most interesting. He briefly pictured the condition of the British Isles during the closing years of the 16th century, and demonstrated the influences that were at work to induce emigration. Raleigh was a pioneer in the work of colonization, and this phase of his career was the part especially dwelt upon by the professor. He was complete master of his subject and presented it in a clear and convincing manner enlivened by numerous touches and in a rich Scotch accent that was most pleasing to his hearers. The people of Napanee are highly favored in having presented to them this series of interesting lectures, and it is a surprising fact that so few seem to take advantage of them. The largest hall in Napanee should be easily filled when such a rich treat is presented free of charge. In order that the public may be better advised of the dates of these addresses, notices hereafter will be posted in the public library, the post-office and a few other conspicuous places about town to remind the citizens of the treat that is in store for them.

Mr. John Cameron, Postmaster at London, and formerly editor of The Globe dropped dead.

Hamilton citizens tendered a banquet to Hon. J. M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

Constable Wilkins of Simcoe, was shot by Chief of Police Malone, and is in a critical condition.

There is now practically nothing to keep the Hudson insurgents from entering Port au Prince.

Bitterly cold weather is reported in the west. At Esterhazy, Sask., Robert Mark, a C.P.R. section foreman, was found frozen to death beside the track.

DEATH OF DANIEL HIGLEY

The death of one of Napanee's oldest residents occurred on Wednesday morn- ing, when Mr. Daniel Higley passed away at the ripe old age of 89 years, 8 months, and 9 days. The subject of this sketch was born in Onondaga County, New York State, on the 23d day of February, 1819. In 1854 he came to Canada, his mission being the re-location of what was known at that time as the Stone Mills at Glenora, his occupation being a millwright and he was consider- one of the best in the country in his day. Five years later he came to Nap- anee and has been a continuous resident of our town for the past fifty years. He has seen it grow from a struggling vil- lage to its present status. About twenty- five years ago he had the contract for overhauling the "big mill" now owned by Mr. J. R. Baker "Grandpa" Higley was well known by the children as well as by the older generation, and his cheery good morning was looked for expectantly by the little ones who were great favorites of the old gentle- man. He leaves two sons and one dau- ghter to mourn. The sons are Daniel in Vancouver, B.C., and Richard in Mex- ico. The daughter, Mrs. Ferguson, lived at home with her father and did also a sister-in-law, Mrs. Shaw, and a grand- son, Mr. Daniel Ferguson, who have the sympathy of their many friends in their bereavement. The funeral will take place this (Friday) afternoon at 2 o'clock, from his late residence Mill of Servaes, at the house, there to the vault at Riverview cemetery.

KINGSTON INSTITUTIONS.

To Care for Poor of Lennox and Ad- dington.

The united counties of Lennox and Addington have decided to place their poor under the care of the House of In- dustry and House of Providence in King- ston. This matter of caring for the county poor has been gone into thorough ly by the Warden, C. W. Hambly, and the County Clerk, W. G. Wilson, solicitor of Napanee. They inspected the two in- stitutions in Kingston and reported very favorably. Warden Hambly, who has been one of the most energetic war- dens who has ever filled the chair, and who has done everything in his power for the betterment of his counties, was much in favor of the above procedure. W. G. Wilson, the County Clerk and le- gal adviser of the counties, also did much to further the matter. The counties are to be congratulated upon sending such capable men to investigate and thorough- ly study the subject. The County Coun- cil could not have made a better move than sanctioning their recommendation for different places that have built coun- ty houses have found them a burden on their hands. HELPLESS 3 WEEKS

HANDS COVERED WITH ECZEMA

AMPUTATION FEARED, BUT ZAM-BUK SAVED.

"For three long months I was not able to attend to my own needs; and for three weeks the eczema on my hands was so bad that I was unable to feed myself. I had to be fed as one feeds a baby, because I could not hold knife, fork, spoon or cup." So says Miss Violet McSerley, of 75, Gore Street, South Ste. Marie, in telling how Zam-Buk cured her of eczema. She adds: "Hands, wrists and arms up to the elbows were covered with eczema. The itching and the soreness were both unbearable. As the disease developed the skin actually peeled off leaving raw sores. The pains, fingers, backs of my hands and wrists were all in this shocking state, and I was forced to sit in agony all the while.

The raw sores grew worse in a foul condition, and my finger nails, all I could take, fell off. During the different stages of my trouble, I sought the advice of three different doctors and received treatment, but although getting slight relief at first there was no cure. Amputation was at one time thought necessary but the timely introduction of Zam-Buk prevented this horrible ending.

Zam-Buk was recommended by a friend and we bought a supply. The first few applications gave me a little ease, but it was not until I had continued with it for some time that I felt a decided improvement. After that my cure went on quickly. Zam-Buk did what everything else had failed to do. Now my hands and arms are quite freed from the terrible eczema.

Are you suffering from skin disease? If so, take Miss McSerley's advice and try Zam-Buk.

"Is your son-in-law, the duke, a good conversationalist?"

"Well," answered Mr. Cumrox, "he's willing enough. But my former son-in-law was a prize fighter. He never lied sure whether he is talking about his pedigree or thinking up a menu for dinner."

I AM A MOTHER

How many American women in lonely homes to-day long for this blessing to come into their lives, and to be able to utter these words, but because of some organic derangement this happiness is denied them.

Every woman interested in this subject should know that preparation for motherhood is accomplished by the use of

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Mrs. Maggie Gilmer, of West Union, S. C., writes to Mrs. Pinkham: "I was greatly run-down in health from a weakness peculiar to my sex, when Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me. It not only restored me to perfect health, but to my delight I am a mother."

Mrs. Josephine Hall, of Barlstown, Ky., writes:

"I was a very great sufferer from female troubles, and my physician failed to help me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound not only restored me to perfect health, but I am now a proud mother."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumours, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

CUTLERY

A Natural Conclusion

A merchant who has been selling goods at a certain price suddenly sees his prices or gives a little more of the article for the same amount of money, the only conclusion for the public to arrive at is that he has been charging for more than he should or else has been cutting on the quantity. You know perfectly well that prices on first-class goods cannot be haggled. Some goods the better class cost more than others and must be sold at a higher price. We buy only first-class goods, and every purchase we make from us you get full value for your money in quantity and quality. We fully guarantee every article we sell. Remember, we are here to stay. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Call and see our Cutlery this week. We have a very large assortment to select from, and you will find our prices right. Also Razors, Strops, etc. Don't forget that we have 200 patterns.

A DECIDED SUCCESS.

It what is said of the bazaar held in the Town Hall, November 26th, by the ladies of the Western Methodist church. The interior of the hall presented a very attractive appearance with the booths tastefully arranged along the sides, and they reflected much credit on those who had charge of that part of the work. In the centre of the hall was an oriental booth with cosy divans, where you might rest and be refreshed with a cup of tea and forgetting for a time the rain and mud outside. Sales were brisk throughout the entire day and the reasonable charges were appreciated, and at six o'clock only a few minor articles were left unsold. The hall was then cleared for the concert, which was certainly of a high order, and was listened to by a large and appreciative audience. The ladies feel very grateful to those who so kindly assisted in making the evening one of rare enjoyment.

A SAD DEATH.

The sad news of the death of Mr. Aubrey H. NEWBURGH.

The pupils of the High School and those who attended their Literary meeting on Friday afternoon last enjoyed a rare treat in the address of Mr. Dudley Hill, of Napanee, on our Canadian Banking System. After a brief introduction devoted to an explanation of the value of money as a medium of exchange, Mr. Hill explained the steps in the organization of a bank under our system, and its practical working, giving many illustrations of popular misconception in regard to these matters. He also gave in round figures the assets, surplus, amount of business, etc., in over 30 chartered banks, in their 1911 branches. The address throughout was most lucid and extremely interesting as well as highly instructive both to pupils and visitors. The principal expressed the hearty thanks of the school to Mr. Hill for his lecture.

The literary and musical numbers on the programme was also thoroughly enjoyed two choruses by the Glee Club, readings by Misses Lela Johnston and Nellie Saunders, violin solo by Miss Etta Lewis, vocal solo by Mr. Percy Nesbit and a piano duet by Misses Pearl Patterson and Nora Sweet. The final meeting of the Literary Society for the present term will be held on the afternoon of the 18th when a varied programme will be given, and prizes won in the autumn sports will be presented.

P. D. Shorey shipped 22 pairs to Saskatchewan on Monday, a clearing of three varieties from his grounds.

Mrs. (Rev.) Jos. Gandier returned on Thursday from a month's visit in Toronto, and on Saturday Mrs. M. Ryan returned from a month's visit in New York.

In the item of last week's correspondence regarding Ryan & Son's large poultry business the 300 lbs. mentioned as having come in in one day should have read 1000 lbs.

Since the celebration of the Jubilee of the Methodist church the Treasurer of the Jubilee Fund, Mr. A. Courtney, has received a few contributions from outside friends of the church. He wishes to close his books in this connection by the 21st of this month, and would be glad if all contributions were in by that date.

At a meeting of Court Newburgh, I.O.F., on Tuesday night the following officers were elected: C.R., S. N. Kellar; V.C.R., J. M. Treas., D. M. Hamilton; R.S., F. Hill; Orator, Rev. J. Gandier; Physician, C.D.H.C.R., P. D. Shorey; S.W.B., Shorts; I.B., E. Nasin; S.B., Jas. Shorey; H.T., Jas. Gerow. The officers will be installed on the 12th of January.

The Ladies' Aid of St. John's church are obliged to cancel the dinner and tea at their evening in the Drill Hall, Dec. 30th, owing to their inability to secure a talented talent from Napanee on that date. The concert will be held early in the new year, and the date will be announced as early as possible.

The recital services in the Methodist church on Sunday last were good and have already resulted in much spiritual good, especially among the people of the church. They will continue until the 18th.

At the meeting of the Council on Monday night the organization of a Band of Hope was discussed at length and a meeting of ratepayers called for Wednesday night. At this meeting Mr. Gandier, organist, Miss Chapman and Perry Madden as Secretary, a brigade of the following members was chosen: G. F. Hill, M. B. Dunnett, Fred Shorts, P. W. Madden, James Fox, John Shorts, W. H. Emery, P. D. Shorey, H. Ryan, T. Farr, J. Samuson and S. Fox. Officers were to be chosen by the brigade on Thursday night.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

Mr. Editor.—For the last fifteen years the people residing on the north part of John street (in an intermittant sort of way) have been asking for a sewer from Dr. Cowan's corner northward, and although the property holders have been willing to pay their proportion of the cost, their request has been refused by the Council on the plea of "no funds." In the summer of 1907 Tweed attacked that part of the street and in 1908 six cases in one house was the result, while the street is ablaze with electric light, neither needed or paid for. Town money lavished on parks, libraries, salaries, poultry shows, education, brass bands, etc., all of which may be necessary. Will the coming Council attend to this case? This to us is the question of the hour.

ANOTHER WONDER OF SCIENCE.

Biology has Proved that Dandruff is Caused by a Germ.

Science is doing wonders these days in medicine as well as in mechanics. Since Adam lived, the human race has been troubled with dandruff, for which no hair preparation has heretofore proved a successful cure until Newbro's Herpicide was put on the market. It is a scientific preparation that kills the germ that makes dandruff or scurf by digging into the scalp to get at the root of the hair, where lays the vitality; causing itching, falling hair, and finally baldness. With its dandruff fair must grow luxuriantly. It is the only destroyer of dandruff. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

International Newspaper Bible Study Club

GOLD AND SILVER MEDALS, BIBLES, BOOKS.

Persons may join the Club at any time during the year, but must, of course, answer the 52 questions hereinafter explained, to qualify for the prizes. It is, however, desirable that the questions be answered as the lessons are studied.

The International Newspaper Bible Study Club is for the purpose of promoting, in an unbiased way among the newspapers, the study of the Bible, the fundamental truths of Christianity, and the problems which enter into every-day life. It is composed of all those who join a Local Club, and take the simple course herein outlined, barring only ordained clergymen. We have the sympathetic cooperation of the latter, but it is not considered fair to have them compete for the prizes. Sunday School teachers, Bible class scholars, and church-goers generally, may belong to this Newspaper Club, also non-churchgoers, of all shades of opinion. All such who have not joined are warmly invited to do so and to compete for the prizes.

The Beaver has secured the right to publish the International Sunday School Lesson questions by Rev. Dr. Linscott, which have aroused so much interest elsewhere, and they will appear weekly. One of these questions each week is to be answered in writing, and upon these answers the prizes are to be awarded.

The Beaver is authorized to form a Local Newspaper Bible Study Club for the readers, and guarantees to all who join and subscribe the conditions given below, a course of Bible instruction entirely free.

CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST.

1. Each contestant, of his or her family, must be a subscriber to this paper during the continuance of the contest, in order to qualify for membership in the International Newspaper Bible Study Club and this Local Club.

2. Each contestant in this Local Club must answer each of the written questions for 52 consecutive weeks, commencing the Sunday next after Dec. 20th, 1903. The answers must all be in by the session of the contest, within one week of the close of this period, which also allows two weeks grace after the end of the contest.

3. Each question must be answered separately, and the paper written on one side only. Not more than one hundred words in length and must be legible. It will be a convenience if students will write their answers on letter paper, about 8½ inches by 11 inches.

4. Each answer must have the name and address of the writer at the bottom of the answer, so it can be identified. The number registered and then the name put on as the examiner may know it by number only.

5. Students should be careful to understand the question before answering. To do this, the lesson text must be read and especially the verse, or verses, upon which the question is based.

6. The answers from this Local Club must be delivered to the examiner, who will be enlisted at the close of the contest, and forwarded to headquarters for the general examination by competent examiners. The prizes will consist of a series of awards to the highest in the list of points won by members of The International Newspaper Bible Study Club. Duplicate prizes will be awarded to members of this Local Club, and will be given each in turn.

THE PRIZES.

First Series—A gold medal to each of the first five contestants.

Second Series—A silver medal to each of the next five contestants.

Third Series—A Teachers' Bible, price $3.50, to each of the next ten contestants.

Fourth Series—To the next ten contestants a Concordance, price $1.50, to each of the next ten contestants.

Fifth Series—A devotional mind, an expansion of imagination, a richer experience and more profound knowledge of the Bible and life, to all who take this course should be winning any other prize or not.

Every medal will be suitably engraved, giving the name of the winner, and for what it was awarded, and the name of the Bible and book will be inscribed.

All who can win prizes, or their ideas, are urged to take up these studies regardless of age, sex, or former education, as the prizes are not valued from an educational or literary standpoint, but rather as a reward for the exercise of their reasoning faculties.

Solomon Dedicates the Temple. 1 Kings viii.

Golden Text—I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord.—Psalm cxxii. 1.

Verses 1-11. These verses describe a grand gathering of the king, the priests and the people for a great religious festival. Why was it be a good thing for every church to have such gatherings sometimes? Is there any value in the ceremonial institution of a nation, such as that of the Jews? Is there any value to them in a church today, are such of great importance? Is the Lord's Supper of such importance? Why?

Verse 10. What is the best thing for a church to gain in such a service?

Verse 11. Should every person who professes to be a Christian be willing to do what would be the best reward? Is there any reward for anything in the service of the Lord?

Verses 27-30. Are the promises in this chapter to be made with this meaning, or are they to be spiritualized? Is the kingdom of God to be the kingdom of God? Is it to be the kingdom of his truth?

The Temple of God?

What reason is there to believe that each individual is a link in the chain which connects the past with the future? What importance has in the case of David and Solomon?

Verses 22-61—Ministers, like Solomon, often spread out their hands when about to preach in the pulpit; is there any significance in this gesture, or is it simply a graceful or meaningless motion?

Verses 29-30 intimated that there is only one Almighty God, and are there any powerful spirits, either good or evil, whom we should not worship? Is there anything in what the ancients called "the gods"?

God's promises in general, and to the individual, are sure. Is there any in the laws of gravitation? What is the evil in sin? Why is the case?

Verses 35-36—Is a proper prayer ever to ask God to keep his promises?

What is the best thing to keep God reminded of his promises, or to take it for granted that he will be remembered? Is it to ask God for grace to keep our part of the compact?

Verse 57—What is the supreme evidence that God does dwell on the earth and in the hearts of each individual?

Verse 59—Speaking from actual test, experience, what is the value of prayer? Is there any sense in this great prayer of Solomon extending to the generations to be prepared before hand?

Should ministers prepare their prayers with as much care as they should their sermons?

Which is the more important part of public worship, the prayers or the sermon?

Solomon assumes in this prayer that all calamities, both national and personal, are a result of sin, is that assumption correct?

Is a minister's prayer for God to forgive the sins of the people, of any avail, if the people continue in sin?

Verses 62-66—What is the chief or supreme object of the Christian ministry today?

What are the churches doing for this country?

Lesson for Sunday, Dec. 20th, 1903—Solomon's Wealth.—1 Kings x. 14-25.

ZAM-BUK AS A CURE FOR PILES.

IMPRESSIVE CURES OF WOMEN SUFFERERS.

Our Readers Should Note these cases

Wherever there is suffering from piles, Zam-Buk should be applied! There are lots of reasons for this, but one of the best is that in practically all cases of piles where the use of Zam-Buk is persevered with complete cure—not mere relief—is the result.

Mrs. Wm. Hughes, of 253, Hochelaga Street, Hochelaga, Montreal, says:—"I suffered from blind, itching, and protruding piles for years. Sometimes they were so bad that I could hardly bear to move about. The inflammation, the burning smart, the throbbing, the aching, the overpowering feelings of distress and dark despair which this ailment brings, the shooting spasms of agony—all were too terrible that only sufferers from this awful ailment can understand!

"Had my case been Zam-Buk triumphed, and Mrs. Hughes suffers no longer. It needed a little perseverance with Zam-Buk certainly, but in the end it cured!"

Mrs. Wm. Bovall, of Scott Street, St. Thomas, says:—"For months without exception I endured great pain from bleeding piles. For as many months I tried everything which I thought would give me ease, but in the end, dispirited and still suffering, I gave in.

"Then it was she heard of Zam-Buk, and she adds:—"Although I had very little faith, as I'm like the ordinary remedies—useless—I am glad it was not. It soon proved itself very different. It rapidly gave me relief, and after a time cured me completely. I would like to say to all sufferers from piles know what a grand thing Zam-Buk is."

So one could go on quoting case after case, and it is by working such cures that Zam-Buk has earned for itself its great reputation.

Now if you suffer from this terribly painful ailment just be guided by the foregoing cases!

For internal piles—melt a little Zam-Buk and thoroughly wash a wad into the bowel as far as finger. Then made of clean lint and lubricated with Zam-Buk will be found of great benefit. For external, application of Zam-Buk is still more simple. Do it every time. Next morning you will be well satisfied!

Zam-Buk is a cure also for cold sores, and chapped cracked hands, ulcers, festering sores, blood poisoning, eczema, salt fez, ring worm, scalp sores, burns, scalds, and all skin abuses and ailments.

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c a box, or may be obtained post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. 4 boxes for $1.25. You are warned against accepting cheap imitations, dangerous substitutes sometimes offered as being just as good.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Napanee, Dec. 7th, 1903.

To the Editor:—

Dear Sir:—as Mrs. Bell and myself arrived home on Saturday, I thought I would just give your many readers of The Beaver a description of a few of the many towns and villages that we passed through on our way home. When we left Rathburn there was a Mr. Mason from Napanee there, and grand chopping, but it soon cleared away as we got closer home. Our first chance was at Beaverton, which is a small town, but is progressive, and has a good business.

Our next change was at Blackwater Junction. It is here we leave Simcoe from the black and muddy water which surrounds it. The land in this vicinity is principally sand, and very high hills and full of small round stone, making it very difficult land to work.

Lindsay is a very large town and prettily situated on the shore of a large lake, and is very nicely laid out, and in a good part of the country.

Omemee is a small town situated in a low flat surrounded on one side with a large swamp and on the other with hills and ledges, so that it is not a desirable place to live.

Peterboro' is a large and beautiful city, and is nicely situated in a very productive part of the country. The land is very level for some miles around, and from Peterboro' to this city has improved for the last three years by leaps and bounds, making it a very fine farming land.

Fraserville is a small town, about two miles from Peterboro'. The land is not good and covered with hills and stones, so that it is not a very desirable place to live or farm.

Peterboro' is a large and beautiful city, and is nicely situated in a very productive part of the country. The land is very level for some miles around

BAD FIRE AT KINGSTON.

Establishments of Wormwith Piano Company and a Wholesale Grocery Destroyed.

The most disastrous fire that has visited Kingston in years occurred at an early hour on Sunday morning the establishments and contents of the Wormwith Piano Company and W. G. Craig & Co.'s wholesale grocery firm, at the corner of Princess and Ontario streets, being destroyed. The fire, which originated in the varnish room, was first discovered by the police at 2 a.m., but when the fire department arrived the flames had gained such headway that it was impossible to get them under control before both establishments were entirely gutted. In the afternoon the stone walls which remained standing were dynamited in order to remove the danger of their falling. One man named Duffy was slightly injured in the afternoon in this way. The estimated damage to the Craig firm is $30,000, with $25,000 insurance. The damage to the Wormwith Company, the superintendent of the firm is yet unable to estimate, but it will probably be far in excess of the $40,000 insurance on the building and contents. There were 300 pianos in process of manufacture, with thirteen instruments ready to ship.

The fire will mean loss of employment to over 100 men in both establishments. Many valuable tools belonging to the workmen were destroyed. The piano company had orders ahead for two years' work, and its destruction will mean a big loss both to the city and the firm.

Undigested Food

When any portion of food remains in the stomach and refuses to digest, it causes the torments of indigestion. This undigested food rapidly ferments, irritating the sensitive lining of the stomach, while other parts of the body, particularly the head, suffer in consequence.

So long as this undigested food remains in the stomach, the discomfort continues. A few doses of stop all fermentation, sweeten the contents of the stomach and give natural assistance that relieves the stomach of its burden. The use of Beecham's Pills gradually strengthens the stomachic nerves and soon it becomes the rule and not the exception to have a normal, healthy condition.

Beecham's Pills positively cure all stomach troubles, while their beneficial effect on the liver and kidneys greatly improve the general health.

Beecham's Pills have been used and recommended by the general public for over fifty years.

Bacon's fame is mainly due to books written in his spare hours, while he was England's chancellor. Humboldt's days were so occupied with his business that he had to pursue his scientific labors in the night or early morning. Burns wrote his most beautiful poems in his spare moments while working on a farm. Grote wrote his "History of Greece" during the odds and ends of time snatched from his duty as a banker. Moments are the golden sands of time! if rightly used.

SINCERITY.

In life sincerity is the sure touchstone of character. The good and valuable man is he who strives to realize day by day his own sincere conceptions of true manhood. Thousands are struggling to exhibit what some one else admires to reach the popular standard, to be or appear to be respectable and honorable, but few make it their aim to live thoroughly up to their own individual convictions of what is right and good.

Carlyle well says: "At all turns a man who will do faithfully needs to believe firmly. If he have to ask at every turn the world's suffrage, if he cannot dispense with the world's suffrage and make his own suffrage serve, he is a poor eye servant, and the work committed to him will be misdone."

ther. Diplomacy therefore must serve. He must force his enemies beyond the law and into his trap. She had pounced the word once. She would do so again.

He hurried to Stillman's house and returned to the presence of his guests. He told the story so artfully that the Judge's astonished unbelief yielded to rage and cowardice, and he sent for his niece. She came down, white and silent, having heard the last words. The old man berated her with shrewish fury, while McNamara stood silent. The girl listened with entire self control until her uncle made a reference to Glenister that she found intolerable.

"Hush! I will not listen!" she cried passionately. "I warned him because you would have sacrificed him after he had saved our lives. That is all. He is an honest man, and I am grateful to him. That is the only foundation for your insult."

McNamara, with apparent candor, broke in:

"You thought you were doing right, of course, but your action will have terrible consequences. Now we'll have riot, bloodshed and heaven knows what. It was to save all this that I wanted to break up their organization. A week's imprisonment would have done it, but now they're armed and belligerent, and we'll have a battle tonight."

"No, no," she cried. "There mustn't be any violence."

"There is no use trying to check them. They are rushing to their own destruction. I have learned that they plan to attack the Midas tonight, and I'll have fifty soldiers waiting for them there. It is a shame, for they are decent fellows blinded by ignorance and misled by that young miner. This will be the blackest night the north has ever seen."

With this McNamara left the house and went in search of Voorhees, remarking to himself: "Now, Miss Helen, send your warning—the sooner the better. If I know those vigilantes, it will set them crazy, and yet not crazy enough to attack the Midas. They will strike for us, and when they hit ivy poor unguarded office they'll think hell has moved north."

"Mr. Marshal," said he to his tool, "I want you to gather forty men quietly and to arm them with Winchesters. They must be fellows who won't faint at blood. You know the kind. Assemble them at my office after dark, one at a time, by the back way. It must be done with absolute secrecy. Now, see if you can do this one thing and not get bailed up. If you fail, I'll make you answer to me."

"Why don't you get the troops?" ventured Voorhees.

"If there's one thing I want to avoid, it's soldiers, either here or at the mines. When they step in, we step out, and I'm not ready for that just yet." The receiver smiled sinisterly.

Helen Chalmers had fled to her room and there received Glenister's note through Cherry Malotte's messenger. It rekindled her worst fears and bore out McNamara's prophesy. The more she read of it the more certain she grew that the crisis was only a question of hours and that with darkness tragedy would walk the streets of Nome. The thought of the wrong already done was lost in the lonely girl's terror of the crime about to happen, for it seemed to her she had been the instrument to set these forces in motion, that she had loosed this swift speeding avalanche of greed, hatred and brutality. And when the crash should come—the girl shuddered. It must not be. She would shriek a warning from the housetops even at the cost of her uncle, of McNamara and of herself. And yet she had no proof that a crime existed. Although it all lay clear in her own mind, the certainty of it arose only from her intuition. If only she were able to take a hand—if only she were not a woman. Then Cherry Malotte's words burst. Struve received to her, "A bottle of wine and a woman's face." They brought back the lawyer's assurance that those documents she had safeguarded all through the long springtime journey really contained the proof. If they did, then they held the power to check this impending conflict. Her uncle and the boss would not dare continue if threatened with exposure and prosecution. The more she thought of it the more urgent seemed the necessity to prevent the battle of tonight. There was a chance here at least, and the only one.

Adding to her mental torment was the constant vision of that face in the curtains at the Northern. It was her brother, yet what appearance should this affair aim? What kept him from her? What caused him to slink away like a thief discovered? She grew dizzy and hysterical.

Struve turned in his chair as the door to his private office opened, then leaped to his feet at sight of the gray eyed girl standing there.

"I came for the papers," she said.

"I knew you would." The blood went out of his cheeks, then surged back to his eyes. "It's a bargain then?"

She nodded. "Give them to me first."

He laughed unpleasantly. "What do you take me for? I'll keep my part of the bargain if you'll keep yours. But this is no place, nor time. There's riot in the air, and I'm busy preparing for tonight. Come back tomorrow when it's all over."

But it was the terror of tonight's doings that led her into his power.

"I'll never come back," she said. "It is my whim to know today—yes, at once."

He meditated for a time. "Then today it shall be. I'll shirk the fight, I'll sacrifice what shreds of duty have clung to me, because the fever in you is in my bones, and it seems to me I'd do murder for it. That's the kind of a man I am, and I have no pride in myself because of it. But I've always been that way. We'll ride to the Sign of the Sled. It's a roadhouse three and a half hours from here, perched high above the Snake river trail. We'll take dinner there together."

"But the papers—"

"I'll have them with me. We'll start in an hour."

"In an hour," she echoed lifelessly and left him.

He chuckled grimly and seized the telephone. "Central—call the Sled roadhouse—seven rings on the Snake river branch. Hello! That you, Shorty? This is Struve. Anybody at the house? Good. Turn them away if they come and say that you're closed. None of your business. I'll be out about dark, so have dinner for two. Spread yourself and keep the place clear. Goodby."

Strengthened by Glenister's note, Helen went straight to the other woman and this time was not kept waiting nor greeted with sneers, but found Cherry cloaked in a shy dignity, which she stopped tightly about herself. Under her visitor's incoherence she lost her diffidence, however, and, when Helen had finished, remarked, with decision: "Don't go with him. He's a bad man."

"But I must. The blood of those men will be on me if I don't stop this tragedy. If those papers tell the tale I think they do, I can call off my uncle and make McNamara give back the mines. You said Struve told you the whole scheme. Did you see the proof?"

"No, I have only his word, but he spoke of those documents repeatedly, saying they contained his instructions to tie up the mines in order to give a foothold for the lawsuits. He bragged that the rest of the gang were in his power and that he could hand them in the penitentiary for conspiracy. That's all."

"It's the only chance," said Helen. "They are sending soldiers to the Midas to tie in ambush, and you must warn the vigilantes." Cherry paled at this and ejaculated:

"Good Lord! Roy said he'd lead an attack tonight." The two stared at each other.

"If I succeed with Struve I can stop it all—all of this injustice and crime—everything."

"Do you realize what you're risking?" Cherry demanded. "That man is an animal. You'll have to kill him to save yourself, and he'll never give up those proofs."

"Yes, he will," said Helen fiercely, "and I defy him to harm me. The Sign of the Sled is a public roadhouse with a landlord, a telephone and other guests. Will you warn Mr. Glenister about the troops?"

"I will, and bless you for a brave girl. Wait a moment." Cherry took from the dresser her tiny revolver. "Don't hesitate to use this. I want you to know also that I'm sorry for what I said yesterday."

As she hurried away Helen reclined with a shock the change that the past few months had wrought in her. In truth, it was as Glenister had said, his northland worked strangely with its denizens. What of that shrinking girl who had stepped out of the sheltered life, strong only in her untried modesty, to become a hunted, harried thing, juggling with honor and reputation, in her heart a half formed fear that she might kill a man this night to gain her end? The elements were molding her with irresistible hands. Roy's contact with the primitive had not roughened him ogre quickly than had hers.

She met her appointment with Struve, and they rode away for three, he talkative and elated, she silent and icy.

Late in the afternoon the cloud banks to the eastward assumed alarming proportions. They brought with them an early nightfall, and when they broke let forth a tempest which equaled that of the previous night. During the first of it armed men came sifting into McNamara's office from the rear and were hidden throughout the building. Whenever he descried a peculiarly desperate ruffian the boss called him aside for private instruction and gave a minute description of a wide shouldered, erect youth in white hat and half boots. Gradually he set his trap with the same coolness had raked from the slums, and when it was done smiled to himself. As he thought it over he ceased to regret the miscarriage of last night's plan, for it had served to goad his enemies to the point he desired, to the point where they would rush to their own undoing. He thought with satisfaction of the sum he would play in the United States press when the sensational news of this night's adventure came out. A court official who dared to do his duty despite a lawless mob. A receiver who turned a midnight attack into a rout and shambles. That is what they would say. What if he did exceed his authority thereafter? What if there were a scandal? Who would question? As to soldiers—no, decidedly no. He wished no help of soldiers at this time.

GRASS EGGS.

When a hen is made sick eating too freely of grass she lays what are known as "grass eggs." Grass eggs are poor stuff. They have an unpleasant flavor, and the yolk wabbles around in a weak and watery white and is green and dull in color. The term is also applied by candlers, who discover while testing that there is no pale greenish hue to the eggs and that they are not at all of the bright, fresh color that we find in healthy eggs.

Annoyed by boys who were snowballing him, Adolph Schultz, of Bethencourt, Que., shot and mortally wounded one of the lads.

DECLINED WITH REGRETS.

The bibulous citizen was holding high carnival on the street when an officer approached him and said:

"Come with me to the station house."

The disturber of the peace paused to look from the officer and began:

"Hold on a minute, m' friend."

"No, I won't hold on a minute. You come with me.

"Hold on jus' half a minute. I want jus' one word with you."

"All right," replied the officer impatiently. "Be quick about it. What is it you want to say?"

"All I want t' say is jus' this: I 'preciate your invitation, but I jus' can't go."

PRETTY FEET ALWAYS PAINFUL.

Pretty feet are always painful feet. Shoes, rarely, if ever, fit them; hence they carry their possessors haltingly, and, too often they must direct themselves toward the chiropodist's. The high arched instep, the pretty foot's essential quality, is yet in a way a deformity, for it causes an abnormal tightness of the tendon governing the toes, and the toes in consequence all turn under a little, as though trying to grasp something. Turning under, the joints stand out prominently, just as the knuckles stand out when the fingers are closed. The leather of the shoe rubs and irritates these prominent joints, and the pretty foot's pretty owner pays the penalty in many a smart, in many a jumping pain.

Five Queen's University students were fined $10 each for rioting. A number of students hooted Mayor Rowe on the market and called him traitor because he refused to secure the release of the men arrested on Saturday night.

SERIOUS DEPLETION IN FUNDS

HARD TIMES HARD ON THE POOR CONSUMPTIVE

Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives Makes an Urgent Appeal for Money.

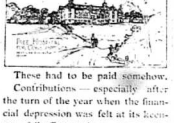
$35,000 Required to Cover Bank Overdraft and Provide for Maintenance of Poor Patients.

These head-lines tell the story of our needs.

They are heavy and urgent.

Many times during the past twelve months the question has pressed itself upon the Trustees, "Can we continue the work further?"

Every month brought its quota of accounts for salaries and wages of staff, bills of butcher, milkman, eggs, groceries, heavy coal bills—a serious item—and other unconfrollable expenses so long as the doors were kept open.



These had to be paid somehow. Contributions — especially after the turn of the year when the financial depression was felt at its keenest—fell off to such an extent, that each month the burden became heavier.

During all this period there was only one thing to do, and that was to lean on our banker—swelling the bank overdraft.

The trial was the severest in the history of these Muskoka Homes, in which nearly 3,000 persons, stricken by the dread white plague, have been cared for.

Shack Life at Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives.

But never for a single hour did the doors of the Free Hospital fail to swing open, and give a welcome to suffering ones without money and without price.

The good news has gone forth of a rich harvest the wide Dominion over.

Friends, we come to you at this time, when the clouds of depression are being lifted, asking that you now—in the direness of our extremity—help to lift the burden being carried—not for any personal gain, but solely, alone, only on behalf of suffering sisters and brothers.

Our plea is on behalf of the sick ones.

What will you give?
Do not say nay.
Help generously.
Help all you can.
Help some.
Help now.

Contributions may be sent to W. J. Gage, Esq., Chairman Executive Committee, 84 Spadina Avenue, Toronto; or J. S. Robertson, Sec.-Treasurer National Sanitarium Association, 347 King Street West, Toronto, Canada.

The sight of a ship in the offing toward shore found him somewhat easier, for, notwithstanding the assurance that the course of justice in the San Francisco courts had been clogged, he knew Bill Wheaton to be a resourceful lawyer and a determined man. Therefore it relieved him to see the rising gale, which precluded the possibility of interference from that source. Let them come tomorrow if they would. By that time some of the miners would be ownerless and his position strengthened a hundredfold.

He telephoned the mines to throw out guards, although he reasoned that none but madmen would think of striking there in the face of the warning which he knew must have been transmitted through Helen. Putting on his raincoat he sought Stillman.

"Bring your niece over to my place tonight. There's trouble in the air and I'm prepared for it."

"She hasn't returned from her ride yet. I'm afraid she'll caught in the storm." Too judge gazed anxiously into the darkness.

During all the long day the vigilantes lay in hiding, impatient at their idleness and wondering at the lack of effort made toward their discovery, not dreaming that McNamara had more cleverly hidden plans behind. When Cherry's note of warning came they gathered in the back room and gave voice to their opinions.

"There's only one way to clear the atmosphere," said the chairman.

"You bet," chorused the others. "They've garrisoned the mines, so let's go through the town and make a clean job of it. Let's hang the whole outfit to one post."

This met with general approval, Glenister alone demurring. Said he: "I have reasoned it ort differently, and I want you to hear me through before deciding. Last night I got word from Wheaton that the California courts are against us. He attributes it to influence, but whatever the reason, we are cut off from all legal help either in this court or on appeal. Now, suppose we lynch these officials tonight, what do we gain? Martinl law in two hours, our mines tied up for another year, and who knows what else? Maybe a corrupter court next season. Suppose, on the other hand, we fail, and somehow I feel that we will, for that hoss is no fool. What then? Those of us who don't find the morgue will end in jail. You say we can't meet the soldiers. I say we can and must. We must carry this row to them. We must jump it past the courts of Alaska, past the courts of California, and up to the White House, where there's one honest man, at least. We must do something to wake up the men in Washington. We must get out of politics, for McNamara can beat us there. Although he's a strong man he can't corrupt the president. We have one shot left, and it must reach the Potomac. When Uncle Sam takes a hand we'll get a square deal, so I say let us strike at the Midas tonight and take her if we can. Some of us will go down, but what of it?"

Following this harangue, he outlined a plan which in its unique daring took away their breaths, and as he filled in detail after detail they brightened with excitement and that love of the long chance which makes gamblers of those who thread the silent valleys or tread the edge of things. His boldness stirred them and enthusiasm did the rest.

"All I wait for myself," he said, "is the chance to run the big risk. It's mine by right."

Dextry spoke breathlessly to Slapjack in the pause which ensued:

"Ain't he a heller?"

"Well, go you," the miners chimed in as one. And the chairman added: "Let's have Glenister lead this forlorn hope. I am willing to stand or fall on his judgment." They acquiesced without a dissenting voice, and with the firm hands of a natural leader the young man took control.

"Let's hurry up," said one. "It's a long march and the mud is knee deep."

"No waiting for us," said Roy. "We'll go by train."

"By train? How can we get a train?"

"Steal it," he answered, at which Dextry grinned delightedly at his loose jointed companion, and Slapjack showed his toothless gums in answer, saying:

"He sure is."

A few more words and Glenister, accompanied by these two, slipped out into the whirling storm, and a half hour later the rest followed, by way of the vigilantes left, the blackness blotting them up an arm's length from the door, till at last the big, bleak warehouse echoed hollowly to the voice of the wind and water.

Over in the east end of the town, behind dark windows upon which the sheeted rain beat furiously, other armed men lay patiently waiting—waiting some word from the bulky shadow which stood with folded arms close against a square of gray, while over their heads a wretched old man paced back and forth, wringing his hands, pausing at every turn to peer out into the night and to mumble the name of his sister's child.

CHAPTER XIX.

EARLY in the evening Cherry Malone opened her door to find the Bronco Kid on her step. He entered and threw off his rubber coat. Having him well,she waited for his disclosure of his errand. His sallow skin was without a trace of color, his eyes were strangely feverdevo lines had gathered about his lips, while his hands kept up constant little nervous explorations as though for days and nights he had not slept and now hovered on the verge of some hysteria. He showed the same pressure of a smoldering mine with the fire eating close up to the powder. She judged that his body had been racked by every passion till now it hung jaded and weary, yielding only to the spur of his restless, revengeful spirit.

After a few objectless remarks he began abruptly:

"Do you love Roy Gleuister?" His voice, like his manner, was jealously eager, and he watchedher carefully as she replied without quibble or deceit:

"Yes, Kid, and I always shall. He is the only true man I have ever known, and I'm not ashamed of my feelings."

For a long time he studied her and then broke into rapid speech, allowing her no time for interruption.

"I've held back and held back because I'm no talker, and it isn't in my business. But this is my last chance, and I want to put myself right with you. I'm a man, and I've been since the Dawson days, not in the way you'd expect from a man of my sort perhaps, but in line with the kind of love that a woman wants. I never showed my hand, for what was the use? That man outyard me in my kind of game years back only I wouldn't leave this country as long as you were part of it, and up here I'm only a gambler, fit for nothing else. I'd made up my mind to let you have him till something happened a couple of months ago, but now it can't go through. I'll have to down him. It isn't concerning you. I'm not a welcher. No, it's a thing I can't talk about—a thing that's made me into a wolf, made me skulk and walk the alleys like a dago. It's put murder into my heart. I've tried to assassinate him. I tried it here last night—but—I was a gentleman once—till the cards came. He knows the answer now, though, and he's ready for me, so one of us will go out like a candle when we meet. I felt that I had to tell you before I cut him down or before he got me."

"You're talking like a madman, Kid," she replied, "and you mustn't turn against him now. He has troubles enough. I never knew you cared for me. What a tangle it is, to be sure. You love me, I know, he loves that girl, and she loves a crook. Isn't that tragedy enough without your adding to it? You come at a bad time, too, for I'm half insane. There's something dreadful in the air tonight"—

"I'll have to kill him," the man muttered doggedly, and, plead or reason as she would, she could get nothing from him except those words till at last she turned upon him fiercely.

"You say you love me. Very well, let's see if you do. I know the kind of a man you are, and I know what this feud will mean to him, coming just at this time. Put it aside and I'll marry you."

The gambler rose slowly to his feet. "You do love him, don't you?" She bowed her face, and he winced, but continued: "I wouldn't make you my wife that way. I didn't mean it that way."

At this she laughed bitterly. "Oh, I see. Of course not. How foolish of me to expect it of a man like you. I understand what you mean now, and the bargain will stand just the same, if that is what you came for. I wanted to leave this life and be good, to go away and start over and play the game square, but I see it's no use. I'll pay. I know how relentless you are, and the price is low enough. You can have me—and that—marriage talk —I'll not speak of again. I'll stay what I am for his sake."

"Stop!" cried the Kid. "You're wrong. I'm not that kind of a sport." His voice broke suddenly, its vehemence shaking his slim body. "Oh, Cherry, I love you the way a man ought to love a woman, and I've got to do some good things left in me, and I want to take you away from here where we can't be with him. Come to Nome, where we can start new, as you say."

"You would marry me?" she asked.

"In an hour and I'll give him Cherry's blood for the privilege, but I can't stop this thing, not even if your own flesh hung upon it. I must kill that man."

She approached him and laid her arms about his neck, and he stood like a body pleading, but he refused steadfastly, while the sweat stood out upon his brow.

She begged: "They're all against him, Kid. He's fighting a hopeless fight. He told all he knew and came of free, and I'll do the same for you."

The man growled savagely. "He got his reward. I'll be back soon, girl"—

"Don't be a fool. I guess I know. You're a faro dealer, but you haven't any right to take the life of a good woman, even to a bad one like me."

In the dark eyes slowly crept a hungry look, and she felt him tremble and tremble the least bit. He undertook to speak, paused, wet his lips, then carefully disengaged himself.

"Do you mean—that he did not—that she is a—a good girl?"

"Absolutely."

He sat down weakly and passed a shaking hand over his face, which had begun to twitch, and Jerk again as it had on that night when his weakness was thwarted.

"I may as well tell you that I knew she's more than that. She's honest and high principled. I don't know why I'm saying this, but it was on my mind since dawn, and I've been supposed to be square. She's in danger tonight, though —at this minute. I don't dare to think of her long. I have supposed, for she's risked everything to make reparation to Roy and his friends."

"What?"

"She's gone to the Sign of the Sled alone with Struve."

Slowly he steadied the gambler, leaping to his feet. "Alone with Struve on a night like this?" He shook her fiercely, crying: "What for? Tell me quick!"

She recounted the reason for Helen's adventure, while the man's face became terrible.

"Oh, Kid, I am to blame for letting her go. What did I do it? I'm afraid—afraid."

"The Sign of the Sled belongs to Struve, and the fellow who runs it is a rogue." The Bronco looked at the clock, his eyes bloodshot and dull like those of a goaded, sick animal. "It's 8 o'clock now—ten miles—two hours. Too late!"

"What ails you?" she questioned, baffled by his strange demeanor. "You called me the one woman just now, and yet"—

He swung toward her heavily. "She's my sister."

"Your—sister? Oh, I—I'm glad. I'm glad—but don't stand there like a wooden man, for you're work to do. Wake up. Can't you hear? She's in peril!" Her words whipped him out of his stupor so that he drew himself somewhat under control. "Get into your coat. Hurry! Hurry! My horse, take you there." She snatched his garment from the chair and held it for him while the Bronco back into his coat. Together they dashed out into the storm as she and Roy had done, and as he flung the saddle on the bronco, she said:

"I understand it all now. You heard the talk about her and Glenister; but that was true. I lied and lied and intrigued against her, but it's over now. I guess there's a little streak of good in me somewhere, after all."

He spoke to her from the saddle. "It's more than a streak, Cherry, and you're in my kind of people." She smiled wanly back at him under the lantern light.

"That's left handed, Kid. I don't want to be your kind. I want to be his kind—or your sister's kind."

Upon leaving the rendezvous Glenister and his two friends slunk through the night, avoiding the life and lights of the town, while the wind surged out of the voids to seaward, driving its wet burden through their dripping slickers, pelting their faces as though enraged at its failure to wash away the purposes written there. Their course brought them to a cabin at the western outskirts of the city, where they paused long enough to adjust something beneath the brims of their hats.

Fast them ran the iron rails of the narrow gauged road which led out across the quaking tundra to the mountains and the mines. Upon this slender trail of steel there rolled one small, ungainly teapot of an engine which daily creaked and clanked back and forth at a snail's pace, screaming and wailing its complaint of the two light loaded flatcars behind. The ties beneath it were spiked to planks laid lengthwise over the semi-liquid roadbed, in places sagging beneath the surface till the humpbacked, short waisted locomotive yawed and reeled and squealed like a drunken fishwife. At night it panted wearily into the board station and there sighed and coughed and hissed away its fatigue as the coals died and the breath relaxed in its lungs.

"I don't want to be your kind. I want to be his kind."

Early to bed and early to rise was perforce the motto of its grimy crew, who lived near by. Tonight they were just retiring when stayed by a summons at their door. The engineer opened it to admit what appeared to his astonished eyes to be a Krupp cannon propelled by a man in yellow oiled clothes and white cotton mask. This weapon assumed the proportions of a great one eyed monster, which stared with baleful fixity at the man, halting him a cold and empty feeling. Away back beyond this Cyclops of the Sightless Orb were two other strangers likewise equipped.

The fireman arose from his chair, dropping as he rose, and the man halting but, being of the west, without cavil or waste of wind he stretched his hands above his head, balancing on one foot to keep his unshod member from the damp floor. He had unbuckled his belt, and now, assisted by the movement, his overalls seemed best on sinking floorward in an ecstasy of abasement at the moment. The engineer with convulsive grip he hugged them to their duty, one hand and foot still elevated as though in the grand halting sign of some secret order. The other man was new to the ways of the north, so he backed in the midst of his quaking, laid both hands protectingly upon his middle and doubled up, remarking fervidly:

"Don't point that damned thing at my stomach."

"He, he!" laughed the fireman, with unnatural loudness. "Have your joke, boys."

"This ain't no joke," said the foremost figure, its breath bellying out the mask at its mouth.

"Sure it is," insisted the shoeless one. "Must be. We ain't got anything worth stealing."

"Get into your clothes and come along. We won't hurt you." The two obeyed and were taken to the sleeping engine and there commanded to produce a full head of steam in thirty minutes or suffer a premature taking off and a prompt ellision from the vocal and applied mechanics. As stimulus to their efforts two of the men stood over them till the engine began to sob and sigh reluctantly. Through the gloom that curtained the cab they saw other dim forms materializing and climbing silently on to the cars behind. Then, as the steam gauge touched the mark, the word was given, and the train rumbled out from its shelter, its shrill plaint at curb and crossing whipped away and drowned in the storm.

Slapjack remained in the cab, gun in lap, while Dextry climbed back to Glenister. He found the young man in good spirits, despite the discomfort of his exposed position, and striving to light his pipe behind the shelter of his coat.

"Is the dynamite aboard?" the old man questioned.

"Sure. Enough to ballast a battleship."

As the train crept out of the camp and across the river bridge, its only light or glimmer the sparks that were snatched and harried by the blast, the partners seated themselves on the powder cases and conversed guardedly, their common peril brought the friends together again, into that close bond which had been theirs without interruption until this recent episode in the younger had led him to choose paths at variance with the old man's ideas; and now they spoke, heart to heart, in the half restless, half jesting ways of old, while beneath each whimsical irony was that mutual love and understanding which had consecrated their partnership.

Arriving at the end of the road, the vigilantes debouched and went into the darkness of the canyon behind their leader, to whom the trails were familiar. He bade them halt, then finally and gave his last instructions.

"They are on the alert, so you want to be careful. Divide into two parties and close in from both sides, creeping as near to the pickets as possible without discovery. Remember to wait for the last blast. When it comes, cut loose and charge like Sloux. Don't shoot to kill at first, for they're only soldiers and under orders, but if they stand—well, every man must do his work."

Dextry appealed to the dim figures forming the circle.

"I leave it to you, gents, if it ain't better for me to go inside than for the boy. I've had more experience with giant powder, an' I'm as blamed used up an' near gone it wouldn't hurt if they did get me, while he's right in his prime."

Glenister stopped him. "I won't yield the privilege. Come now—to your places, men."

They rushed away to each side while the old prospector paused to wring his partner's hand.

"I'd rather it was me, lad, but if they get you—God help 'em!" He stumbled after the departing shadows, leaving Roy alone. With his naked fingers, Glenister clipped open the powder cases and secreted the contents in his pockets. Each case held one dynamite enough to devastate a village, and he loaded them inside his pockets, then placed them in his hat. Having finished, he set out, walking with difficulty under the weight he carried.

That his choice of location had been well made was evidenced by the fact that the ground beneath his feet sloped away to a point from which bobbed a spring. It furnished the drinking supply of the Midas, and he knew every inch of the crevice it had worn down the mountain, so felt his way cautiously along. At the bottom of the hill where it ran out upon the level it had worn a considerable ditch through the soil, and into this he crawled on hands and knees. His bulging clothes handicapped him so that his gait was slow and awkward, while the rain had swelled the streamlet till it trickled over his calves and up to his wrists, chilling him so that his muscles cramped and his very bones cried out with it. The sharp schist cut into his palms till they were shredded and bleeding, while his knees found every jagged bit of bedrock over which he dragged himself. He could not see an arm's length ahead, without rising, and, having removed his slicker for greater freedom of movement, the rain beat upon his back till he was soaked and sodden and felt streamlets cleaving downward between his ribs. Now and again he squatted upon his haunches, straining his eyes to either side. The banks were barely high enough to shield him. At last he came to a bridge of planks spanning the ditch and was about to rear himself for another look when he suddenly flattened into the stream bed, half daunting the water with his body. It was for this he had so carefully wrapped his fuses. A man passed over him so close above that he might have touched him. The sentry paused a few paces beyond and accosted another, then removed his station over the bridge. Evidently this was the picket line, so Roy wormed his way forward till he saw the blacker blackness of the mine buildings, then drew himself, dripping, out from the bank. He had run the gantlet safely.

Since entering the owners, Lawrence had erected substantial houses in place of the tents he had found on the mine. They were of frame and corrugated iron, sheathed within and suited to withstand a moderate exposure. The partners had viewed them at a station from a distance, but knew nothing about the buildings from close examination.

A thrill of affection for this place warmed the young man. He loved this old mine. It had realized the dream of his boyhood and had answered the hope he had clung to during his long night spent in the northland. It had come to him when he was disheartened, bringing cheer and happiness, and had yielded itself like a bride. Now it seemed a crime to ravage it.

He crept toward the nearest wall and listened. Within was the sound of voices, though the windows were dark, showing that the inhabitants were on the alert. Beneath the foundations he made mysterious preparations, then sought out the office building and took house, doing likewise. He found that back of the seaming of the pose of the Midas there was a strained expectancy.

Although suspense had lengthened the time out of all calculation, he judged he had been gone from his companions at least an hour and that they must be in place by now. If they were not—if anything failed at this eleventh hour—well, those were the fortunes of war. In every enterprise, however carefully planned, there comes a time when chance must take its turn.

He made his way inside the blacksmith shop and fumbled for a match. Just as he was about to strike it he heard the swish of oiled clothes passing and waited for some time. Then, igniting his punk and hiding it under his coat, he opened the door to listen. The wind had died down now, and the rain sang musically upon the metal roofs.

He run swiftly from house to house, and, when he had done, at the apices of the triangle he had traced three glowing coals were sputtering.

The final bolt was launched at last. He stepped down into the ditch and drew his .45, while to his tautened senses it seemed that the very hills leaned forth from their places and the rain had ceased and the whole night hushed its thousand voices. He counted the lower jaw set so rigidly the muscles ached. Leveling his weapon at the eaves of the bunk house he pulled trigger rapidly, the flame lighting, six times repeated, sounding dull and dead beneath the blanket of mist that enveloping. A shout sounded behind him, and then the shriek of a Winchester ball close over his head. He threw himself in line of the gushing stream out of the darkness, where a sentry was firing at the flash of his pistol, then bent himself double and plunged down the ditch.

With the first impact overhead the men poured forth from their quarters armed and bristling, to be greeted by a volley of gunshots, the third of both feet and the whistling white of speed lead. They leaped from shelter to find themselves girt with a fiftal loop of fire, for the "Stranger" had spread in the arc of a circle and now emptied their rifles toward the center, the defendent, however, unhindered and sprinting order considering the suddenness of their attack and run to join the sentries, whose positions would be determined by the nearer flashes. The voice of a man in authority showed loud commands. No dem-station came from the outer solid mine, but the wicked streaks that stabbed the darkness. Then suddenly behind McNamara's men the night gaped luridly as though a great furnace door had opened and then clanged shut, while with it came a house thudding roar that silenced the rifle play. How saw the cook house disrupt itself and disintegrate in a thousand timbers and twisted shreds of tin which soared upward and outward over their heads and into the mists. As the rocking hills crashed upon the sound of the vigilantes' rifles incurred like the cracking of dry sticks, then every face about the defenders in the earth was lashed by falling debris, while the iron roof rang at the foot-balls.

The blast had come at their ear, it bows, and they were too dazed and shaken to it to grasp its significance. Then, before they could realize what it bodied, the depths lit up again as the raiseprops were outlined distorted and distancing like a gossamer of silver, while the mine buildings of their left was ripped and rended and the adjoining walls leaped out into sudden relief, their shattered windows looking like ghostly, sightless eyes. The curtain of darkness closed beaufter than ever, and the men cowered in their tracks, shielding themselves behind the nearest objects or behind one another's bodies, waiting for the sky to vomit over them its rain of missiles. Their backs were to the vigilantes now, their faces to the center. Many had dropped their rifles. The thunder of hoofs and the scream of terrified horses came from the stables. The cry of a maddened beast is weird and calculated to curdle the blood at best, but with it arose a human voice, shrieking from pain and fear of death.

Christmas Stamps

A Million to be Sold Before Christmas.

Every penny from the sale of stamps, after paying for printing and distribution, will be used for the maintenance of patients at the MUSKOKA FREE HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTIVES, and for extending the fight against the dread White Plague.

This Christmas Stamp idea was started in Denmark about four years ago, where the cash returns have built and financed a Consumptive Hospital. A year ago, the Red Cross Society of Denmark sold over 400,000 stamps. With the co-operation of stores, churches, clubs, and boys and girls. In fact, everybody helped in this popular movement, and this year their National Red Cross Society is selling the stamps all over the States.

A STAMP FOR CANADA

The neat little stamp in red and white, like above cut, and selling at one cent each, is published by the National Sanitarium Association in the interests of the Muskoka Free Hospital. The stamp does not pay postage, but may be put on letters, packages and Christmas cards of all kinds, and will bear the happy Season's Greetings everywhere.

Willing workers all over the Dominion are organizing little bands for stamp selling. The hospital board is hoping that over a million stamps will be sold before Christmas, and the work for the consumptive poor from sea to sea will be greatly strengthened. Other interesting information may be obtained by writing Mr. J. S. Robertson, Secy.-Treas. of the Association, 347 King Street West, Toronto.

All Danger Is Past, Says Health Officer.

Business Men May Come and Go, and Outsiders Having Business Here Need Have no Fear of Coming to the City.—Dr. J. H. Bell Gives Statement to The Standard.

(Reprinted from The Kingston Standard, Dec. 1st.)

It has come to the knowledge of The Standard that travellers and others accustomed to come to Kingston are now passing the city by, on the ground that they are afraid that the city may be quarantined, and for the reason that they have been misled by false and exaggerated reports of conditions here, which have represented the health of the city as bad.

To set at end effectually these idle stories and to convince these travellers and others of the error of their ways and the foolishness of their position The Standard here and now presents an official statement from the Medical Health Officer of the city—Dr. John H. Bell—as to conditions. The statement speaks for itself, for it says plainly

"BUSINESS MEN AND THOSE DOING BUSINESS OUTSIDE THE CITY AND OUTSIDERS HAVING BUSINESS TO DO IN THE CITY NEED HAVE NO FURTHER CAUSE FOR ALARM AS I BELIEVE THE SITUATION IS ABSOLUTELY SAFE AND THEY MAY FEEL FREE TO GO AND COME AS THEY WILL, IN SECURITY AND SAFETY."

The statement is as follows:

Office of Medical Health Officer,
Kingston, Ont., Dec. 1, 1908.

It is my honest and serious conviction and opinion that the epidemic is practically at an end in this city.

On account of the extensive vaccination practiced in our city and the immunity practically caused to at least nine-tenths of our citizens, I believe the danger of any further outbreak is past and business men and those doing business outside the city and outsiders having business to do in the city need have no further cause for alarm, as I believe the situation is absolutely safe and they may feel free to go and come as they will in security and safety.

JOHN H. BELL,
Medical Health Officer.

REST!

Rest! How sweet the sound! It is melody to my ears. It lies as a reviving cordial at my heart, and from thence sends forth fresh spirits, which beat through all the pulses of my soul. Rest, not as the stone that rests on the earth, nor as the flesh shall rest in the grave, not such a rest as the carnal world desires. O blessed rest, when we cease not day and night, saying, "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty." O blessed day, when I shall rest with God, when my perfect soul and body shall together perfectly enjoy the most perfect God; when God, who is love Himself, shall perfectly love me and rest in this love to me, as I shall rest in my love to Him, and rejoice over me with joy, and joy over me with singing, as I shall rejoice in Him! No more, my soul, shalt thou lament the sufferings of the saints, or the church's ruins, nor mourn by sorrowing friends, nor weep over their dying beds or their graves. Thou shall never suffer thy old temptations from Satan, the world, of thy own flesh. Thy pains and sickness are all cured; thy body shall no more burden thee with weakness and weariness; thy aching head and heart, thy hunger and thirst, thy sleep and labor are all gone. O what a mighty change is this!

HOW STRANGE.

I love to eat; also I love to drink,
The cautions of the brave physician's scorning
I like to get my coffee, black as ink,
The first thing in the morning.

I tackle grape fruit in a surly mood;
My nerves I notice then with ease are flattered,
But I'll proceed to eat my breakfast food,
My eggs and toast well buttered.

My ham and buckwheat cakes, and when I'm through
I'm feeling somewhat like a well filled sundown,
And, save a bite or two, I make that do
Until it's time for luncheon.

The "something light" to some tastes may appeal—
Makeshifts that just the appetite diminish.
I seem to hanker for a solid meal—
With pie to finish.

I dine at 7, then a little snack
At midnight makes me sleep beyond a question,
Unless, perchance, I have a slight attack
Of that blamed indigestion.

But all the same I feel my spirits sink;
I'm always blue and irritable, very
It's strange that though I love to eat and drink
I really can't be merry.

Blankets that are to be washed may, with advantage, be first soaked in warm soft water for fifteen minutes. Shave some good laundry soap into boiling water and leave to dissolve to a jelly. Make a lather of the soap jelly and warm soft water, adding a tablespoonful of ammonia to every gallon of water. Squeeze the soaked blankets, put them into the soap suds, and squeeze and churn them about, rubbing the soiled placeg with the hands. Rinse through several waters, all at the same temperature, put through a wringer, shake hard and hang where they will dry quickly, but not near great heat.

Lace and net curtains will not pull out of shape when being pinned to the drying frames if the curtains have a strip of white tape tacked around the edges before being washed. Shake the dust out of the curtains, and if they are very dirty with the winter's smoke and dust, soak them in three or four waters, a few minutes in each, before putting into the wash water.

THE PART OF SYMPATHY.

We crave sympathy; it is part of a true soul, and so great is the heart's craving for sympathy that the temptation is very great to impose our calamities on others. Into the sacred smpyathy of a chosen few we can pour the struggles of our heart-agonies, and let those close friends rejoice to share our burden, but it is blasphemous intrusion to let the outer world, through our sad faces and sadder voices, enter the sanctuary of our sacrificial sorrows. The sorrows, the trials, the disappointments of life are the most exclusive and sacred elements of human experience, and only the chosen few must walk in the midst of them. When these personal and sacred things become recognized into habitual sadness and mourning we have profaned their sanctity, and from other hearts their gladness. It is impossible for those about us to be glad when we are sad, and it is better to steal a man's money from his purse than to steal the music from his soul.

IT DOESN'T PAY.

My young friend, there are many things in this world that it doesn't pay to do.

It doesn't pay to try to pass yourself off for more than you are worth.

It doesn't pay to lie, for your lies must all be kept on file mentally, and in the use of time some of them are pretty certain to get on the wrong book. A liar needs a better memory than anyone is apt to possess.

It doesn't pay to try to get a living by cheating. You will work harder and get a poorer living than if you did honest work.

It doesn't pay to be a practical joker unless you can enjoy the joke when you stand to be the victim.

It doesn't pay to rest when you ought to be at work; if you do, you are pretty sure to have to work when you ought to be resting.

LITTLE PITCHERS.

I got real mad the other day
With Willie Jones an' said
I'd hop out if he got too gay
An' punch his darn food head.
Much good my pa she called me in
An' spanked me, too, by gum!
She didn't seem to care a pin
When father mashed his thumb.

Maybe I was wrong for days to use the language that I did.
An' grown folks never will excuse a cuss word in a kid.
I s'pose that "darn" is a naughty word
It's reckoned so by some,
But that's not much to what I heard
When father mashed his thumb.

But just you wait till I get krowed
As big as father is An' Willie Jones gets in my road!
I bet you'll hear things siz.
My mouth gets me hot
In that sweet time to come
I'll show 'em that I learned a lot
When father mashed his thumb.

Kindness is the greatest power in the world. A kind heart is a fairly good head and a kind, generous heart is sure to succeed. A young woman with a kind heart is very likely to get a good husband and a good home, if she wants them. If she is selfish and unkind she ought to have a dude. She sometimes gets him. Then she is properly punished. There are few sorer kinds of punishment for a woman than to be hitched for life to a dude. If you want your boys and girls to grow up respectable and respected, an honor to yourself and a blessing to society, sow the good seed of kindness in their hearts in the springtime of life.

NATURE SPARES

The Stricken Rose From Grief.

What a fortunate provision of nature it is that deprives the rose of mental suffering; for how poignant would be its grief to discover, in the height of its blooming glory, that a canker fed at its heart, and that its beauty and fragrance were doomed forever. Nature always spares the suffering; she is a veritable storehouse of pleasing rewards, for those who seek for all the good that is to be found in life. Even the falling hair and grays as have been a gloom over the lives of thousands of young women, but thanks to the invention of scientists in this age the cause of hair destruction is now known to be germs or microbes that burrow into the hair follicles. Newbro's Herpicide destroys these germs, thus enabling the hair to grow as nature intended. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

International Newspaper Bible Study Club

GOLD AND SILVER MEDALS, BIBLES, BOOKS.

Persons may join the Club at any time during the year, but must, of course, answer the 52 questions hereinafter explained, to qualify for the prizes. It is, however, desirable that the questions be answered as the lessons are studied.

The International Newspaper Bible Study Club is for the purpose of promoting, in an unsectarian way among the people, the study of the Bible. The lessons of the Christian Endeavor Society are the basis of study in this country, and the Club will be the same thing in substance, barring the only ordained clergymen. We have the sympathetic co-operation of the Editor, but it is not considered fair to have them compete for the prizes. Sunday School teachers, Bible class scholars, and church-goers generally, may belong to this Bible study Club, also non-churchgoers, of all religious faiths. All such who are not pledged are warmly invited to do as and to compete for the prizes.

The Editor has secured the right to publish the International Sunday School Lesson questions by Rev. Dr. Lincoln, which have aroused so much interest elsewhere, and they will appear weekly. One of these questions each week is to be answered in writing, and upon these answers the prizes are to be awarded.

The Beaver is authorized to form a Local Newspaper Bible Study Club for the people, and guarantees to all who join and fulfil the conditions, that everything herein promised shall be faithfully carried out.

CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST.

1. Each contestant, of his or her family, must be a subscriber to this paper, during the continuance of the contest, in order to qualify for membership in the International Newspaper Bible Study Club and this Local Club.

2. Each contestant in this Local Club must answer each of the written questions, for 52 consecutive weeks, commencing with Sunday, August 23rd, 1903, and the answers of each must appear in some issue of this paper within 14 days of the close of the week for which allows two weeks grace after the close of the quarter.

3. Each question must be answered separately, and the paper written on one side only. No answer must exceed two hundred words in length and may be less. It will be a convenience if students will write their answers on letter paper, about 8½ inches by 11 inches.

4. Each answer must have the name and address of the writer at the bottom of the paper, so it can be identified, given a number, registered and then the same out on the examiner may know it by number only.

5. Students should be careful to understand the question before answering. To do this, the lesson text must be read and especially the verse, or verses, upon which the question is based.

6. The answers from this Local Club must be delivered to this office, and they will be collated at the close of the contest and forwarded to headquarters for independent examination by competent examiners. The prizes will then be awarded according to the number of marks won by each contestant in the International Newspaper Bible Study Club, and prizes which may be awarded to members of this Local Club will be given out from this office.

THE PRIZES.

First Series—A gold medal to each of the first five contestants.

Second Series—Bagster's Bible, price $6.50, to each of the next five contestants.

Third Series—"The Heart of Jesus," by Rev. Dr. Stoddard, to each of the next thirty-five contestants.

Such a course will broaden the mind, an expand imagination, a richer experience and a more comprehensive knowledge of the Bible of life, to all who take this course whether they receive any of the prizes or not.

Each medal will be suitably engraved, giving the name of the winner, and by what it is awarded, and in like manner each Bible and book will be inscribed.

All who can write, and have ideas, are invited to take the studies regardless of the degree of their education, as the papers are graded without reference to education, but are standpoint, but from the point of view of the sagacity of their answers alone.

Solomon's Downfall: I Kings xi:1-13.

Golden Text: Thou shalt have no other gods before me. Ex. xx:3.

Verses 1-3. Should a Christian man ever marry a worldly woman?

If a Christian marries a worldly woman and becomes unequally yoked with her, by dying in that condition, is it possible for him to go to heaven?

Is there another text, or passage of scripture to be united into one, as marriage between Christian and unbeliever is forbidden? This question must be answered in writing by members of the Club.

Suppose Solomon had selected godly life companions for his wives, what would have been the result upon his religious life?

Is Solomon's wife in many more than one wife?

Verse 4. In this sense did David's heart remain true to serving God he, too, had a downfall also.

If a strong man can be led astray by the love of women, to what extent is that influence of the heart of God, with health, long life, and prosperity thrown in?

Why do you suppose God gave such a idea for the marriage relation?

Verses 4-8. Apart from his polygamy, in what other respects did Solomon's reign appear to please God?

Who is it that a man's loyalty to the true God, in such a matter as his religion, and to the continuity of his worldly success depends?

Students of strong religious faith are not long terms in contentment, what great is the difference between the God who has but been true to the Christian's God?

Is the idea with which Solomon is charged here is not so much his polygamy, as the idea of worshipping false gods, or to turn his heart from the true God; how is it true that idolatry is the root of all sin, worst of mortal crimes, as it is the foundation of every crime?

Is polygamy a social crime because the Bible says so, or does the Bible say so because it is so that is, is it a crime against God's moral law?

Should Mahomedan is a polygamist, now would you say that all such are under the curse of God?

Verses 9-10.—Can anything happen to disturb the natural operations of the eternal God?

What is that operation in God, or in the law of God, which answers to anger in man?

How do you account for Solomon's apostacy, in view of God's marvelous appearances to him, and of God's wondrous dealings with him, and his own wisdom and prosperity?

Verses 11-13.—In what conditions did God grant the promise of the kingdom's continuity and the establishment of his throne forever?

In how many respects did Solomon break the part in the covenant?

What is the only condition of every man's continuous prosperity?

Lesson for Sunday, Dec. 27th, 1903.—Review.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the Mucous Surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE REAL STORY OF THE RUSSIAN EMPRESS.

Kelsey Durland, who has spent many months in Russia, is writing for Woman's Home Companion the life story of the Russian Empress. In the December number of that magazine he writes:

When a certain Count Tolstoy was Minister of Public Instruction he once appealed to the Empress to aid him in spreading the educational advantages of the empire. She gave him a generous sum of the country. (I have seen Count Tolstoy's can permission on this intrdeel.)

The Tsaritza listened to the Minister attentively as he set forth the needs of Russia in this direction, and when he had concluded, she replied that she thought all young girls should be taught to take care for their homes; in short to become helpful wives and good mothers. But as for granting them the privilege of history, higher education, she advised against this as she believed the absence of these studies, when offered to women, only resulted in such terrible times as Russia's is now passing through.

This, surely, is a remarkable tribute to the women of Russia—the Tsaritza holding them responsible for the great movement to-day that is a result of their education and culture!

LETTER FROM MERVIN, SASK.

Mervin, Sask., Dec. 5th, 1903.

To the Editor of The Beaver:

Enclosed please find $1.00 for the renewal of the Napanee Beaver.

I see by letter from the east that people in the east think we are all frozen up and our crops all destroyed, but such is not the case.

The ideal weather we had up to the time I wrote before continued all summer, with plenty of rain all the time to keep everything growing nice. Crops in this section are fine. There is plenty of hay for all for the cattle. I put up 150 loads and did not put any of it on our own places. Everyone cut all the wanted and there was lots not cut at all. Potatoes are all the rage here this winter. When Mr. Mollard got into his new house, which is the best one in this district, being 18x30, two stories and a good cellar, and roofed with iron roofing, forty of his neighbors gathered one evening and "tripped" the light fantastic till four o'clock in the morning, when all returned home voting Mr. and Mrs. Mollard ideal hosts and hostess, and wishing them many years of health to enjoy their new home. Horses are cattle are still scarce and very dear. I sold a cow and a heifer two weeks ago for $80. I bought the cow from a Mr. French last March for $25. I have killed some of the steers and have got out of the yearling steers Wm. Finnigan brought out here last fall that weighed over 830 each. I am going to winter ten of the best of them that would be worth $50 each, as there is a big difference in cattle. Here is the place where breed counts.

I mention this to let my old neighbors see that there is a good chance to make money here in keeping stock. I am sorry there is not more of my old neighbors who have back bone enough in them to do as Mr. Mollard did, to sell out and be a settler. They have there for whatever they want, and come west. We had a light frost here on the 11th and 12th of August, but not enough to hurt the grain. The first hard frost we had was on the 23d Sept. We had quite a snow storm on the 21st Oct. but only lay a few days. The ground froze up for winter on the 28th of October, twelve days earlier than last year. We had a heavy snow storm on the 29th of November, and have had good sleighing since.

We expect a new railway passed us in the near future, as there has been a survey this fall across the west side of the section my homestead is in.

Now, I must conclude, as I have already taken up too much space in your valuable paper. Wishing you all success, I remain

Yours truly,

ALEX. WALKER.

ASSELSTINE—MOORE.

A very unique wedding was solemnized Dec. 9th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Flynn, Mountain Grove, when Miss Martha Rose Asselstine, sister of Mrs. Flynn, was united in marriage to Mr. William Alfred Moore, son of Jacob Moore, Esq., of Mountain Grove. Immediately at the appointed hour, 3 o'clock the contracting parties took their places, the groom being ably supported by Mr. Herbert Asselstine, of Sharbot Lake, while the bride was gracefully assisted by Miss Olive Moore, sister of the groom. The ceremony was solemnized under a pretty arch of evergreens, by Rev. J. M. White, of Enterprise. The presents were many and useful, and showed the esteem which the happy couple enjoyed by the guests. After the customary congratulations all enjoyed a sumptuous wedding feast. All join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Moore a long, useful, happy and prosperous voyage through life.

"Peerless Peninsulars"

Are Cast-Iron Ranges Built Like Steel Ranges

"Peerless Peninsular" Ranges have the Drop Oven and Low Closet which have heretofore been exclusive features of the most expensively-built ranges.

They are also the only ranges made with Fire-Box on right or left side, as may better fit the kitchen in which the range is to be placed.

"Peerless Peninsular" Ranges are splendid cookers, are very economical in regard to fuel, are strongly built, and will give a lifetime of service.

Let us show you their many features of superiority. 71

COLEBROOK

The high classed concert held in the Methodist church, Colebrook, on Friday evening last, was a decided success. The house was well filled. Mr. Walker has improved the appearance of his lot by building a new fence around it which is proving a credit to the village, at present, but no serious damage. Thomas Furrs took a trip to Napanee on Saturday afternoon. The young folks of the village are now practicing for their entertainment on Xmas night, and they are preparing for a crowded house.

F. S. Richardson & Bro.'s Studio is the best equipped and most up-to-date photographic Gallery in Ontario. It has a special instrument for taking family groups without correction, and all the entry person clear and sharp. Their cabinet work is unequalled except by any produced in any town or city in Ontario.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS BY REV. DR. LINSCOTT FOR THE INTERNATIONAL-NEWSPAPER BIBLE STUDY CLUB FOR DEC. 5th, 1908.

(Published in accordance with the Copyright Act.)

Solomon's Downfall 1 Kings xi:1-13.

Golden Text Thou shalt have no other gods before me. Ex. xx:3.

Verses 1-3—Should a Christian man ever marry a worldly woman?

If a Christian marries a worldly woman and really loves and respects her, delight ing in her company, is it wrong for him to be a lady man?

In the nature of fact, is it possible for two to be united into one, as marriage requires, when the two are not one in God? This question must be answered in writing by every candidate.

Suppose Solomon had selected godly Hebrew women for his polygamy, in what better result upon his religious life than "Oh Solomon" is made to say?

In what sense did David's heart remain perfect with the Lord? Ps. 1xxxvi. Not a number of wives?

If a strong man can keep from undue love of women, to what extent is that a manifestation of the favor of God, of a long life, and prosperity thrown in?

Why is one man for one woman God's idea for the marriage relation?

Verses 4-8—Assuming that his polygamy, in the final result upon his religious life was wrong, did Solomon do anything more than his own people did?

In what sense did David's heart remain perfect with the Lord? Ps. 1xxxvi. Not a number of wives?

If a strong man can keep from undue love of women, to what extent is that a manifestation of the favor of God, of a long life, and prosperity thrown in?

Why is one man for one woman God's idea for the marriage relation?

Verses 4-8—Assuming that his polygamy, in the final result upon his religious life was wrong, did Solomon do anything more than his own people did?

Why is it that a man is not as near to the God, is such a factor in his happiness and in the maturity of his character after one?

Hundreds of strong brains men are serving long terms in penitentiaries; what proportion of them would be there if they had been true to the Christian's God?

Seeing Santa Claus

By LAURA FROST ARMITAGE.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

I.

EARL (to Ruth)—Oh, I just wish we could see him.

Fred—See whom?

Ruth—Why, Santa Claus. Earl and I have just been talking about him, and we were wishing we could get a peep at him once.

Gladys—Oh, I wouldn't like to!

Dorothy—Harry and I tried it last year. We came down and hid in the front hall, but papa found us and sent us to bed.

Fred (after thinking awhile)—I've thought of something. Santa Claus wouldn't come in if he should spy us, but if he thought we were not real children he might. Couldn't we fool him by making believe we were Mother Goose children right out of the book?

"SANTA WOULDN'T COME IN IF HE SHOULD SPY US."

Dorothy—How could we do that?

Fred—We could dress like them and then stand perfectly still as if we were made of wax or something. Just the way you do in a tableau, you know. He might think it was some kind of a show of wax figures.

Earl—Oh, my! I couldn't keep as still as that.

Harry—You could if you really wanted to see Santa Claus.

Earl—Oh, I will! I will! See me! Gosess!

Gladys—Will we have to stand so very long?

Fred—Oh, not very, very long! We must all be ready before 12 o'clock. We must dress like Mother Goose children, and I'll fix you in your places. I'll be Boy Blue. We can find some dress-up clothes in the attic.

Harry—I think I'll be Jack Horner. I can have a pie.

Dorothy—I want to be Bopeep. A cane with a hook handle will do for a crook.

Gladys—May I be Miss Muffet?

Earl—What can Ruth and I be?

Fred—You might be Jack and Jill and carry a pail of water. An empty pail will do. Now let's be off and see what we can find. Then we'll go to bed, and I'll lie awake, and after papa and mamma go upstairs I'll call you, and we'll come down very softly.

(Exeunt.)

II.

(Children come tiptoeing in in costume, stockings in hand.)

Fred—Now, we'll hang our stockings first. (All hang them.) Then we'll get into place. Bopeep, you stand here. Hold your crook so. Miss Muffet, you must sit on this footstool, and you must be eating. Put your spoon to your lips, so. Jack Horner, get into that corner and hold up your thumb with the plum on it. Jack and Jill, stand over here and take the pail between you. I will stand here and hold my horn to my mouth, so. Now, we mustn't move our eyes. It's getting late. Now, all ready! (All pose.)

Ruth (after awhile)—Oh, dear! This pail is so heavy even if it is empty.

All—Sh!

Gladys (after awhile)—How my arm aches!

All—Sh!

(Earl yawns aloud.)

All—Sh!

Harry—My thumb is tired of standing up.

Dorothy—I'm—so—sleepy (yawning).

All—Sh!

(Jack Horner's hand drops, then his head. Bopeep drops crook and leans against it. Jill drops pail of pail and slides to floor. Jack soon does the same. Miss Muffet's head drops forward. Boy Blue's eyes close and horn falls. This reposes him for a moment, but his eyes soon close again, and he leans against the wall.)

Enter Santa Claus. (All fast asleep.)

Santa Claus—Ah! Well, well, well! Some of the children of my old friend, Mother Goose. I'm what are they doing here? (Walks about and looks at them closely.) Ah! I know these children. They're not Mother Goose's family. Aha! I see what they are up to. They're waiting to see me, and they don't want me to know them. But they can't fool this old fellow. Just as if he didn't know every child in the world. I've found children waiting for me many a time, but they always fall asleep and miss me. I'll fill the stockings, and won't they be surprised when they wake up and find they've missed me after all. (Fills stockings, then puts toy or candy into Miss Muffet's bowl and into Jack and Jill's pail.) Now I must be off. But I believe I'll try that horn of Boy Blue's once. (Blows and runs off, dropping horn near door. Children rouse up a little at sound, then fall back into former position.)

III.

Morning.—Fred (rousing)—Oh, I say! Wake up! What are you all asleep for?

Harry—Who's been asleep?

Dorothy (rubbing eyes)—Not I.

Gladys—I—was—almost—asleep.

Earl (yawning)—Did—he—come?

Ruth (almost crying)—I was so sleepy. Did you all see him?

Others—Oh, no, no!

Fred—Well, I'm afraid we were all asleep. But I heard him. He blew on a big horn.

Harry and Dorothy—I heard him.

Gladys—And there's your horn, Fred, over by the door. He blew on that.

Ruth—See what's in our pail! (Holding it up.)

Gladys—And in my bowl!

Harry—And see the stockings!

All—Oh, oh, oh! (All run to get the stockings.)

Dorothy—Oh, why couldn't we have kept awake?

Fred—Well, we've missed him this time sure. But next year we'll try it again, and we'll all keep awake.

All—Yes, indeed, we will.

Why Saint Nicholas?

By ROBERT DONNELL.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

WHY is Santa Claus sometimes called St. Nicholas? For the most excellent reason that Nicholas is the real name of the saint. Until comparatively recent years there was no Santa Claus at Christmas time. When the old saint comes down the chimney eve, 24, Christmas eve, and deposits gifts for the children in the suspended stockings he is just nineteen days behind time, for his true and proper time is Dec. 5, that being the eve of St. Nicholas day. Just how Nicholas got to be the Christmas eve saint is not altogether clear, but those iconoclasts who dig into ancient matters are probing this secret. They have discovered, or claim to have discovered, that the Christmas eve Santa Claus really originated in America, being transported to England from New York.

In the saints' calendar Dec. 6 is St. Nicholas day. Nicholas was bishop of Myra, in Lycia. He is believed to have lived under the Emperors Diocletian and Constantine and is the patron saint of poor maidens, sailors, travelers, merchants and children. Rich maidens, of course, are also quite willing to acknowledge him when he comes along with diamond dog collars, necklaces and tiaras.

Before the great religious reformation the custom of giving presents on St. Nicholas eve was general throughout Christian Europe. When the worship of the saints was abolished the practice died out in England, where for about three centuries St. Nicholas failed to visit households on the evening of Dec. 5 to leave presents for good children. By the way, it should be pointed out that Nicholas was noted even in infancy as a particularly good and pious child. Therefore his visits are not made to bad children—only to those whose parents can vouch for their good behavior during the previous year.

In Austria, Holland and Poland St. Nicholas eve is still observed. Good children get presents, secretly left in their shoes placed upon the hearthstone for the purpose or in their stockings hung from the mantel. When New York was settled by Hollanders the devout Dutchmen brought over to America their religious customs, not forgetting that of St. Nicholas eve. In old New Amsterdam the saint made his visits the night of Dec. 5, St. Nicholas day being celebrated by the settlers as a holiday. In time the Dutch were supplanted by the English, New Amsterdam became New York, and the old St. Nicholas eve gift giving custom was reintroduced into England from New York. But in England the custom of giftmaking on Christmas eve had grown up. There was, however, no Santa Claus ceremony. Gifts were made outright and without secrecy.

When St. Nicholas sailed back to England there was consternation among fond papas and mammas in the tight little isle.

"What! Shall we have two days of gift giving and less than three weeks apart?" they cried.

Thrifty English parents, it is supposed, determined that one day of giving was enough, and so they simply transferred St. Nicholas to Christmas eve.

BEAD CHRISTMAS TREES.

Novelty Invented by German Woman Approved by Kaiser.

If nature's supply of Christmas trees gives out, as some people have feared it might, there will still be Christmas trees as long as a German woman in this city remains alive. Out of green beads, wire and tiny waxen ornaments she constructs miniature trees which have been thought pretty enough to grace the court of Ludwig of Bavaria in his time and to amuse the children of Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany. That was when the inventor was living in her native country. Since coming to America she has made them for various well known people.

BEAD CHRISTMAS TREE.

One of the advantages of these trees, she says, is that they are almost indestructible. They may be bent, crushed, packed into small compass, and when they are wanted again it is only necessary to straighten the branches out into the original shape.

When the inventor was a girl, fifty-five or sixty years ago, in Munich, she went to one of those schools where German girls are taught to do, as her daughter says, "everything but the hands." It was having to make wreaths out of beads that suggested to her the notion of making bead Christmas trees. She set to work and fashioned innumerable tiny loops of green beads, each at the end of a long slender wire. She bound the loops together in threes, making trefoils, and the trefoils into branches and the branches into a tapering trunk, the trunk being formed of nothing at all but the individual wires massed together. Then she trimmed the tree with candles and those tiny waxen figures which the Germans are adepts at making and fixed it in a pot of sand and melted wax. Her parents were quite proud of it. Her father, who was director of the Hofgarten in Munich, showed it to his royal master, and King Ludwig immediately ordered one for the Christmas festivities at court.

After coming to this country she sent one to President Roosevelt and was grieved and surprised to find that he could not accept it.

"I expect he thinks he gets some dynamite," said the daughter.—New York Tribune.

Christmas Caution.

"Is it customary to hang up one stockin' or de intiah pair on Christmas eve?" said Mr. Erastus Pinkley.

"Only fer one," answered Miss Miriam Brown. "If you hangs on to de mate you isn' takin' so many chances on somebody helpin' himself to foot wear 'stid o' leavin' presents."—Washington Star.

The Gift.

By FRANK H. SWEET.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

THE Christmas chimes are sounding on the air,
And, as I sit and listen to their sweet,
Unearthly music, gone is every care,
Forgot is all the turmoil of the street.
The troubles that the path of man beset,
The vast anxieties of human life,
All fade away, and every fond regret
Is lost in all their glad and joyous strife.

WHAT though I seem alone on this fair day,
From happy comradeship stand isolate,
With none to greet me as I walk my way,
To merely live I count a happy fate—
To merely listen to those joyous sounds
That through the crisp of winter call so free,
Although the merrymakers on their rounds
Pause not to think of or remember me.

ISN'T not enough that on this Christmas morn,
This glad birth morn of him whose day it is,
My heart, but yesterday so sad, forlorn,
Doth open to the message that was his?
Isn't not enough to know that from above
The tidings of a sacrifice divine
Come as a gift of an eternal love
That I have but to take to make it mine?

Odd Christmas Cakes

A GERMAN NOVELTY.

GERMANY for many years has been the land of Christmas novelties, and each year the kaiser's ingenious toy, candy and cake makers devise some oddity which proves irresistible in luring small or great purse from the pockets of Yuletide shoppers. One of the latest specialties is for quaint and humorous Christmas cakes, which are literally cartoons in sugar and dough. The cakes are decorated with all sorts of funny figures made of colored sugar and in many instances are not the crude art products one would expect under the circumstances. The Bavarian peasant, for example, is a fair type of the living original as he is pictured in the German comic weeklies. A Munich waitress carrying a well grouped bunch of foam capped steins of the beverage for which Munich is celebrated at home and abroad, even if she does suggest Selbine a trifle, is decidedly lifelike, while the saluting soldier by his very attitude suggests that foam capped steins and sentry duty do not assimilate very well.

The German authorities have done much to encourage the toymaking industry, particularly by collecting toys from all the world that the toymakers might acquaint themselves with the wants and peculiarities of foreign markets. The wooden animals of the past have been eclipsed by the mechanical toys. A submarine boat which sinks into the water and rises again all with one charge of soda powder, a diver which goes to the bottom and hobnobs in serenity when air is blown into him through a little tube, a Santos-Dumont airship which really flies, a real Gatling gun with stairs for the soldiers to go up, a railroad with full working equipment—these are among the mechanical toys of Sonneberg.

GERMAN CHRISTMAS CAKE—A BAVARIAN PEASANT.

In short, Santa Claus in these times can find the means of gratifying the wishes of his most fastidious petitioner.

HENRY SYDDEL.

Origin of the Christmas Tree.

There is a legend in Germany that when Eve plucked the fatal apple immediately the leaves of the tree shriveled into needle points and its bright green turned dark. It changed its nature and became the evergreen, in all seasons preaching the story of man's fall. Only on Christmas does it bloom brightly with lights and become beautiful with love gifts. The curse is turned into a blessing at the coming of the Child, and we have our Christmas tree.

"Katie, do you know the police-man on the beat?"

"Sure I do, ma'am."

"He told me to-day he had taken up Esperanto."

The Christmas Sister

...By HOWARD FIELDING...

Copyright, 1908, by C. N. Lurie

HERE are two matters which may help to give me a hook of your mind for a few minutes. If you haven't heard of one, you very likely have heard of the other.

First, I am the only original survivor of the Delphic, that was lost at sea in May of 1887, second, in partnership with Tom Campbell I discovered the Golden Bush mine in Idaho. The wreck of the Delphic figures in this story; the Golden Bush mine merely stands in the background as a source of affluence.

I was twelve years old when the Delphic was lost. With my father and mother and infant sister I had sailed from Liverpool in this fine old steamer, which was in collision before she got out of sight of the harbor. She returned and was laid up for several days, and not very much damaged, but most of the passengers were sent forward by another steamer. My parents chose to go to the Delphic, I know not why.

It has always been supposed that she struck an iceberg off the banks. I don't know. That she disaster was a matter of fact. I remember the awful crash, the thrill of fear, the confused terror, and the lumbering of the lifeboats. My father, mother and sister were lowered and disappeared in the darkness. I was lowered and disappeared in the darkness. I was lowered and disappeared in the darkness. I was

The Spoilers.

By REX E. BEACH.

A wrenched and doubled mass of zinc had hurtled out of the heavens and struck some one down. The choking hoarseness of the man's appeal told the story, and those about him broke into flight to escape what might follow, to escape this danger they could not see but which swooped out of the blackness above and under which there was no defense. They fled only to witness another and greater flight behind them by which they saw themselves running, falling, groveling. This time they were hurled from their balance by a concussion which dwarfed the two preceding ones. Some few stood still, staring at the rolling smoke bank as it was rent by the lightnings, their eyes gleaming white, while others buried their faces in their helpless arms as if to shut out the hellish glare, or to shield themselves from a blow.

Out in the heart of the chaos rang a voice loud and clear:

"Beware the next blast!"

At the same instant the girdle of sharpshooters drew up smiting the air with their cries and charged in like madmen through the ruin of detritus. They lived as they came, but it was unnecessary, for there was no longer a fight. It was a rout. The defenders, feeling they had escaped destruction only by a happy chance in leaving the bunk house the fortune they did, were not minded to tarry here where the heavens fell upon their heads. To augment their consternation, the horses had broken from their stalls and were plunging through the confusion. Four swept over the men, blind, surrounded, contagious, and they rushed out into the night, colliding with their enemies, overrunning them in their panic to get to the spot. Some dashed off the bluff and fell among the pits and shrieked. Others ran up the mountain side, and cowered in the brush like quail.

As the "Stranglers" assembled their prisoners, Glenister, who, they heard wounded men moaning in the darkness, ran lit torches and searched out the fallen. Glenister came upon nine lying through the smoke pall, revolver in hand, crying:

"Thank God, you're safe!" she said.

"Who are you?" demanded McNamara.

"We have captured fourteen," another announced, "and there may be more out yonder in the bush."

Glenister noted with growing surprise that not one of the prisoners lined up beneath the glaring torches wore the army blue. They were miners all, or things and puttees gathered from the camps. Where, he wondered, were the soldiers.

"Didn't you have troops from the barracks to help you?" he asked.

"Not a troop. We haven't seen a soldier since we went to work."

At this the young leader became alarmed. Had this whole attack miscarried? Had this been no clash with the United States forces, after all? If so, the news would never reach Washington, and instead of accomplishing his end, he and his friends had thrust themselves into the realms of outlawry, where the soldiers could be remorselessly against them with impunity, where prices would rest upon their heads. Innocent blood had been shed, court property destroyed, ——— Yamura lay there where he would them at last. They were at bay.

The unwounded prisoners were taken to the boundaries of the Midas and released with such warnings as the imagination of Dextry could conjure up. Then Glenister assembled his men, speaking to them plainly:

"Boys, this is no victory. In fact we're worse off than we were before ——— and our biggest fight is coming. There's a chance to get away now before daylight and before we're recognized, but if we're seen here at camp we'll have to stay and fight. Soldiers will be sent against us, but if we hold out, and the struggle is fierce enough, I can get word to Washington. This will be a different kind of fighting now, though. It will be warfare—pure and simple. How many of you will stick?"

"All of us," said they in unison, and, accordingly, preparations for a siege were begun. Barricades were built, ruins removed, buildings transformed into blockhouses, and all through the turbulent night the fresh wounds got till ready to drop, led always by the young giant, who seemed without fatigue.

It was perhaps four hours after midnight when a man sought him out.

"Somebody's callin' you on the assay office telephone—says it's life or death."

Glenister hurried to the building, which had escaped the shocks of the explosions, and, taking down the receiver, was answered by Cherry Malotte.

"Are there no guests here?" she said him, her anxiety very near the surface.

"Travel is light at this time of the year. They'll come in later perhaps."

A fire was burning in this pink room where the landlord had begun spreading the table for two, and its warmth was grateful to the girl. Her companion, thoroughly at his ease, stretched himself on a fur covered couch and smoked.

"Let me see the papers now, Mr. Struve," she began, but he put her off.

"No, not now. Business must wait on our pleasure. Don't spoil our little party, for there's time enough and to spare."

She arose and went to the window, unable to sit still. Looking down the narrow gulch, she saw that the mountains beyond were indistinct, for it was growing dark rapidly. Dense clouds had rolled up from the east. A raindrop struck the glass before her eyes, then another and another, and the hills grew misty behind the coming shower. A traveler with a pack on his back hurried around the corner of the building and past her to the door. At his knock Struve, who had been watching Helen through half shut eyes, arose and went into the other room.

"Thank heaven, some one has come!" she thought. The voices were deadened to a hum by the sod walls till that of the stranger raised itself in such indignant protest that she distinguished his words.

"Oh, I've got money to pay my way! I'm no deadhead."

Shorty mumbled something back.

"I don't care if you are closed. I'm tired, and there's a storm coming."

This time she heard the landlord's refusal and the stranger's angry profanity. A moment later she saw the traveler plodding up the trail toward town.

"What does that mean?" she inquired as the lawyer re-entered.

"Oh, that fellow is a tough, and reports wouldn't let him in. He's a careful whom he entertains, there are so many bad men roaming the hills."

The German came to sheltie to light the lamp, and, although she asked no further questions, Helen's uneasiness increased. She half listened to the stories with which Struve tried to entertain her and ate little of the excellent meal that was shortly served to them. Struve meanwhile ate and drank almost greedily, and the shadowy, sinister evening crept along. A strange cowardice had suddenly overtaken the girl, and if at this late hour she could escape in its favor she would have done so gladly and gone forth to meet the violence of the tempest. But she had gone too far for retreat, and, realizing that for the present apparent compliance was her wisest resource, she sat quiet, answering the man with cool words while his eyes grew brighter, his skin more flushed, his speech more rapid. He talked incessantly and with feverish gayety, smoking numberless cigarettes and apparently unconscious of their coming.

Short took the horses and answered his employer's questions curtly, flashing a curious look at Helen. Under other conditions the girl would have been delighted with the place, for this was the quaintest spot she had found in the north country. The main room held bar and gold scales, a rude table and a large iron heater, while its walls and ceiling were sheeted with white cloth so cunningly stitched and tacked that it seemed a cavern hollowed from chalk. It was filled with trophies of the hills—stuffed birds and animals, skins and antlers—from which depended in careless confusion dog harness, snowshoes, guns and articles of clothing. A door to the left led into the bunk room, where travelers had been wont to sleep in there three deep. To the rear was a kitchen and cache, to the right a compartment which Struve called the art gallery. Here a crude sign had been affixed to the original owner's artistic fancies, and he had covered the place with pictures clipped from gaudy sheets of questionable repute till it was a bewildering arrangement of pink ladies in tights, pugilists in scanty trunks, prize fight scenes and other less moral characters of the sporting world.

"This is probably the worst company you were ever in," Struve observed to Helen, with a forced attempt at lightness.

"Are there no guests here?" she asked him, her anxiety very near the surface.

"Travel is light at this time of the year. They'll come in later perhaps."

A fire was burning in this pink room where the landlord had begun spreading the table for two, and its warmth was grateful to the girl. Her companion, thoroughly at his ease, stretched himself on a fur covered couch and smoked.

TRAVELLER'S VALUABLE FIND.

Travelling on the I.C.R., Mr. Harry Towers, S. Paul Stre t, St. John, N.B., found a box of Zam-Buk, the great skin healer. He was suffering from badly chapped hands at the time so applied the balm, and says:—"Zam-Buk eased the pain and smarting, healed the cracks, and made my hands quite smooth. Finding it so good, I kept a supply handy and have since proved it a really wonderful healer. It cures cuts, sores, or burns equally well, and I would not like now to be without a supply."

Mr. Towers is only one of thousands who are glad they found of Zam-Buk. There is no skin disease it will not relieve and cure. Its fame is spreading everywhere, and it is now regarded as Nature's great "first-aid" in workshop, in the farm, or in the home. No traveller should be without it. Every home should have its box always ready for use. A little Zam-Buk rubbed regularly on the hands and face before retiring each night will keep the skin soft and free from chaps, cold-sores, or disease.

If you have a cut, a bruise, or some irritating skin disease, which has defied all ordinary remedies, apply Zam-Buk. It first cleanses the wound by killing off all harmful bacteria. Then it builds up new tissue cell by cell—just as a bricklayer lays row after row of bricks. Then it covers the wound with a healthy skin, and the cure is effected.

Zam-Buk is also a cure for piles. It gives speedy relief and ends the throbbing, burning pains. Skin diseases, such as eczema, itch, ulcers, barber's rash, rashes due to blood-poison, etc., cannot resist its powerful healing virtues. Purely vegetable, it is an ideal combination of power and purity. Use a box of all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Reject cheap, harmful and dangerous substitutes.

Mi-ona tablets quickly arouse the stomach from its inaction and in a short time it is able to do its work properly.

Sawyer, Dodd & Bridge Street, Hastings, Ont., says: "For seven years I had suffered and spent much money doctoring, but all to no avail. I could eat but very little, as the food would ferment and cause making gas, which caused serious heavy oppression. I was in constant misery and gas would belch from my stomach. I was languid and weak, and had no ambition. I did not feel like going anywhere or seeing anyone. There was a constant dull pain in the pit of the stomach. Was unable to sleep, was nervous, restless, and would awake more tired than on going to bed. I tried Mi-ona and soon found relief, and in less than six weeks Mi-ona had completely cured me.

VINOL FOR OLD PEOPLE

"I am past eighty years of age and for some time I had been losing strength and suffering from a chronic cold and lung trouble, until I was seriously ill and could not go out of doors. My son sent me some Vinol. I commenced to take it and it has simply worked wonders for me. I feel better and stronger than I have for years, and my cough is all gone. There is no other medicine equal to Vinol to build up health and strength for elderly people." Joseph Bankson, Bethany, Ill.

This is because Vinol is the best cod liver and iron tonic in the world. It creates a healthy appetite, strengthens the digestive organs, makes rich, red blood and replaces weakness with strength. The beneficial effect of Vinol in cases of feeble old people is simply remarkable.

We invite all old people, delicate children, weak, run-down persons, convalescents, or those suffering from chronic colds, coughs or bronchitis in this vicinity to try Vinol on our offer to return their money if it does no good. We make the offer, as we have faith in Vinol. T. B. Wallace, Druggist, Napanee, Ont.

of the flight of time. At last he broke off suddenly and consulted his watch, while Helen remembered that she had not heard Shorty in the kitchen for a long time. Suddenly Struve smiled on her peculiarly, with confident cunning. As he leered at her over the disorder left upon them he took from his pocket a dat bundle, which he tossed to her.

"Now for the bargain, eh?"

"Ask the man to remove these dishes," she said as she undid the parcel with clumsy fingers.

"I sent him away two hours ago," said Struve, arising as if to come to her. She shrank back, but he only leaned across, gathered up the four corners of the tablecloth and, twisting them together, carried the whole thing out, the dishes crashing and jangling as he threw his burden recklessly into the kitchen. Then he returned and went with his back to the store, staring at her while she perused the contents of the papers, which were more voluminous than she had supposed.

For a long time the girl pored over the documents. The purport of the papers was only too obvious, and as she read the proof of her uncle's guilt stood out clear and damning. There was no possibility of mistake, and the whole wretched plot stood out plain, its darkest infamies revealed.

At the end of the last paper her disillusionment Helen was nevertheless exhausted with the nerve ecstasy of power, of triumph, knowledge that justice was at last be rendered. It would be her triumph and her expiation that she, who had been the unwitting tool of this miserable clique would be the one through whom restitution was made. She arose with be eyes gleaming and cheeks flushed.

"It is here."

"Of course it is. Enough to convict the whole nests the penitentiary for your precious uncle and your lover." He stretched his chin upward as he spoke, and the thought rose in his throat from an invisible clutch. "Yes, your lover particularly, for he is the real criminal, I'll be bound. I thought you here. He'll marry you, but I'll be the best man." The timbre of his voice was quite pleasant.

"Some let me go," she said.

"Why?" he chuckled intelligently. "That's a fine example of unconscious humor."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, fred, no human being could find his way down to the coast in this tempest; second—but, by the way, let us speak something in those papers while I think of it." He spoke casually and stepped forward, reaching for the package, which she was about to give up, when something prompted her to snatch it behind her back, and it was then that the big hand was but a few inches away. He was no match for her quickness, however, and she was again master of the situation, thrusting the papers into the front of her dress. The sudden contact with Cherry's revolver gave her a certain comfort. She spoke now with determination.

"I intend to leave here at once. Will you bring my horse? Very well, I shall do it myself."

She turned, but his indolence vanished like a flash, and reaching in front of the door, he barred her way.

"Hold on, lady. You ought to understand without my saying any more. Why did I bring you here? Why did I plan this little party? Why did I send that man away? Just to give you the proof of my complicity in a crime, I suppose. Well, hardly. You won't leave here tonight. And—when you do you won't carry those papers with you. I'm safety depends on that, and I am selfish, so don't get me started. Listen!" They caught the wail of the night crying as though hungry for sacrifice. "No, you'll stay here and"—

He broke off abruptly, for Helen had stepped to the telephone and taken down the receiver. He leaped, snatched it from her hand, and, tearing the instrument loose from the wall, raised it above his head, dashed it upon the floor and smashed it to bits. But she wrenched herself free and fled across the room. The man's white hair was wildly tossed, his cords corpsed, and his neck and throat showed swollen, throbbing veins. He stood still, however, and let her proceed into his inner presence, cautious smile.

"Now, don't let's fight about this. It's no use, for I've played to win. You have your proof—now I'll have my price—or else I'll take it. Think over which it will be while I lock up."

Far down the mountain side a man was urging a broken pony recklessly along the trail. The beast was blown and spent, its knees weak and bending, yet the rider forced it as though behind him yelled a thousand devils, spurring headlong through gully and over steep slope and across invisible ravines. Sometimes the animal stumbled and fell with its master, sometimes they arose together, but the man was heedless of all except his haste, insensible to the rain, which was him blindingly, and to the wind, which seized him savagely upon the ridges or gasped at him in the gullies with exhausted malice. At last he gained the plateau and saw the roadhouse light beneath, so drove his heels into the flanks of the wind broken creature, which lunged forward gamely, fell, fell the pony rear and drop away beneath him, leaving only a whistling, and instinctively kicked his feet free from the stirrups, striving to throw himself out of the saddle and clear of the thrashing hoofs. It seemed that he turned over in the air before something smote him, and he lay still, his gaunt, dark face upturned to the rain, while about him the storm screamed exultantly.

The moment Struve disappeared into the outer room Helen darted to the window. It was nailed fast, however, the nailed fast and immovable, but seizing one of the little stools beside the stove she battered through the glass, letting in a smother of wind and water. Before she could escape Struve bounded into the room, his face livid with anger, his voice hoarse and furious.

But as he began to denounce her he paused in amazement, for the girl had drawn Cherry's weapon and leveled it at him. She was very pale, and her breast heaved as from a swift run, while her wondrous gray eyes were lit with a light no man had ever seen before. Fearless, glowing like two jewels whose hearts contained the pent up passion of centuries. She had altered as though under the deft hand of a master sculptor, her nostrils growing thin and arched, her lips tight pressed and firm, her head proudly poised. The rain drove in through the shattered window, over and past her, while the thing had certain looked and whispered her as though in gleeful applause. Her bitter abhorrence of the man made her voice sound strangely unnatural as she commanded:

"Don't dare to stop me!" She moved toward the door, motioning him to retreat before her, and he observed, recognizing the danger of her coolness. She did not note the calculating delivery of his glance, however, nor fathom the purposes he had in mind.

Out on the rain swept mountain the girl went, and he had regained his senses and now was crawling painfully toward the roadhouse. Seen through the dirt he would have resembled some nightshapen, creeping monster, for he dragged himself, reptile-like, close to the ground. But as he came close to the man heard a cry which the wind seemed guarding from his ear, and, hearing it, he rose and rushed blindly forward, staggering like a crumbled beast.

Helen watched her captive closely as he touched through the door before her, for she dared not lose sight of him for a til free. The middle room was lighted by a glass lamp on the bar, and—its gauge showed that the front door was secured by a large iron bolt. She thanked heaven there was no lock and key.

Struve had retreated until his back was to the counter, offering no word, nothing but a look of hate and startled fear, and no intelligence in his eyes showed that he was alert and planning. But when the door behind Helen, which led to the bunk room, opened a crevice, and the light brightness of his eyes showed that he was alert and planning. But when the door behind Helen, which led to the bunk room, opened a crevice, and the light through the broken casement, longed to the man made his first lightning-like move. He reached back to the door, where it burst like an eggshell, and darkness leaped into the room as an animal pounces. Had she been colder or had time for an instant's thought Helen would have hastened back to the bunk room, but she was sway to her liberty and actuated by the sole desire to break out into the open air, so plunged forward. Without warning she was hurled from her feet by a body which came out of the darkness upon her. She met the little gun, but Struve's arms closed about her, the weapon was wrenched from her hand, and she found herself fighting against him, breast to breast, with the fury of desperation. His wine burdened breath beat into her face, and she felt herself pinned to him as though by hoops, while the touch of his cheek against hers turned her into a tigress. In the animal which fought with every ounce of its strength and every nerve of its body, the screamed once, but it was not like the cry of a woman. Then she struggle went on in silence and utter blackness. Struve bending her like a pistilla till she grew faint and her head began to whirl, while darting lights drove past her eyes, and there was the roar of a cataract in her ears. She was a strong girl, and her ripe young body, untried until this moment, answered in every fiber, so that she wrestled with almost a man's strength and he had hard shift to hold her. But so violent an encounter could not last. Helen felt herself drifting free from the earth and losing grip of all things tangible, when at last they tripped and fell against the inner door. This gave way, and at the same moment the man's strength departed as though it were a thing of darkness and dared not face the light that streamed over them. She tore herself from his clutch and ——— ——— ———

GRACE CHURCH, TRENTON.

The re-opening services last Sunday and Monday were a decided success. The congregations were large the services fine. Rev. H. R. Kemp were fine, and the solos by Mrs. Chas. Black of Toronto, were of the very highest order. There has never appeared a singer in East Trenton who could charm and win the hearts of the people as Mrs. Black did on Sunday and Monday. It is to be hoped her visits are a natural thing or she has no superior in this section of the country. The Monday evening was fruitful in which we thankfully acknowledge. The church is now out of debt, and after the usual the lecture room is exchanged over would not know the place. The lecture on Monday night was splendid, and the singing by Mrs. Black was enjoyed and we were glad to see all non-belonging people to attend our services. Trenton Courier.

TO EMPLOYERS OF LABOR.

In order to relieve the utter destitution of the unemployed of this Province, who are willing to gather in the larger centres during the early winter months, it has been decided by the Associated Charities of Toronto to give employment hereon in Toronto. This appeal is being sent broadcast through the Province to the manufacturers, farmers and all people who employ labor, to assist them in this work, and it is earnestly hoped that anyone needing help of any kind, skilled or unskilled, will apply direct to the Associated Charities, Toronto. Employers who are willing to help the unemployed in this way, and capable men willing to undertake work of any kind that may be offered them, who prefer work rather than charity. The help of the people in this district will be considerably lessen the necessity of appeals being made for larger sums of money to be used for charity.

HISTORICAL MEETING.

The next meeting of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society will be held in Bedarina Hall, Napanee, on evening, December 29th, 1908, when Mr. Edward S. Strong, who is one of the foremost newspaper correspondents in the Canadian capital, will give an address on "Ottawa, its Parliament and Some of the Customs and Habits." The inner life at the nation's capital should be very interesting to all of us. Mr. W. S. Herrington will give a paper on "The Poetry of Canadian History." This is another subject about which our knowledge is, as a rule, very limited. We usually think of Laura Secord as the only heroine worth remembering in Canadian History. After the address Mr. Herrington had a subject about which very little has been written, one which did not lack for characters. The meeting is open for the public. Entrance free.

WOOD—STONE.

A happy event occurred at the Western Methodist parsonage, Napanee, on Wednesday evening, Dec. 2d, when the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stone, one of Napanee's fairest young ladies, was united in marriage to Allen William Wood, of Syracuse, N.Y., a popular musician. The charming bride was very becomingly attired in her travelling dress of blue striped wool satin prunella and cream taffeta silk ottist, with pictaresque hat to match. Rev. Emsley united the young couple in the holy bonds, the witnesses being the bride's only sister, Mrs. Irvine W. Miller, of Ernesttown, and Mrs. (Rev.) Emsley. They spent the night in Kingston, and returned home to be greeted amid showers of rice. After a few days visit among friends, they started on the 9th Dec. for their new home in Syracuse, N.Y., where best wishes by all are extended to them for a happy and prosperous married life.

IN LOVING MEMORY.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Ann Donovan, who departed this life Nov. 17th, 1908.

Far beyond this world of shadows,
Far beyond this world of care,
We shall find our missing loved ones
In our Father's heavenly fair;
Forget her? No, we never will,
We loved her here, we love her still,
Nor have her loss become so dear
From here to her heavenly home.

GRACE CHURCH, TRENTON.

The reopening services last Sunday and Monday were a decided success. The congregations were large, the sermons by Rev. H. H. Kemp were fine, and the solos by Mrs. Chas. Black, of Napanee, were of the very highest order. There has never been present a singer in East Trenton who could equal Mrs. Black in the quality of her delightful and sympathetic voice, and glad to have her here again. As a natural result, we has no reporter in this part of the country. The thanksgiving was nearly $200, which we thankfully acknowledge. The church is now neat and attractive, while the interior finish is as changed you would not know the place. The lecture on Monday night was splendid, and the singing by Mrs. Black was soulful and sweet. We invite all surrounding people to attend our services. Trenton Courier.

HISTORICAL MEETING.

The next meeting of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society will be held in Historical Hall on Tuesday evening, December 29th, at 8 o'clock. Mr. Edward W. Grange, who is one of the foremost newspaper correspondents in the Canadian capital, will give an address on "Ottawa, its Parliament and some of the Customs and Habits." The inner life at the nation's capital should be very interesting to all of us. Mr. W. S. Herrington will read a paper on "The Pioneer Canadian Historians." This is a splendid subject about which very few people have any knowledge to speak. Very few people have we had such a splendid line of BOOKS. We usually think of Laura Secord as the only heroine worth mentioning in Canadian History. After hearing this paper you will appreciate that Mr. Herrington had a subject about which very little has been written, but one which did not lack for characters. The meeting is open for the public. Entrance free.

WOOD—STONE.

A happy event occurred at the Western Methodist parsonage, Napanee, on Wednesday evening, Dec. 2nd, when the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stone, one of Ernestown's fairest young ladies, was united in marriage to Allen William Wood, of Syracuse, N.Y., a popular musician. The charming bride was very becomingly attired in her travelling dress of blue striped wool satin panella and cream taffeta silk waist, with picturesque hat to match. Rev. Emsley united the young couple in the holy bonds, the witnesses being the bride's only sister, Mrs. Irvine W. Miller, of Ernestown, and Mrs. (Rev.) Emsley. They spent the night in Napanee, and returned home to be greeted amid showers of rice. After a few days visit among friends, they started on the 9th Dec. for their new home in Syracuse, N.Y., where best wishes by all are extended to them for a happy and prosperous married life.

CASTORIA.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

MUTTON CHOPS AND BEEF-STEAK EN CASSEROLE.

The plain mutton chop and the beefsteak of every-day fare become festive dishes when served en casserole, and the time and labor involved are no more than in the ordinary way of cooking. Besides this, a cheaper grade of beef may be utilized a round steak particularly well adapted for casserole cooking. The absence of bone is a desirable feature, and all fat must be removed from both chops and steak before placing in the casserole.

To cook either beefsteak or mutton chops en casserole, put in the bottom of the casserole a layer of either fresh tomatoes cut in pieces, or else utilize the larger pieces found in the canned article. Sprinkle with pepper and salt and a tiny bit of sugar, and add a teaspoonful of onion-juice if the flavor is liked by the family. On this bed of tomato place the steak or chops and surround with potato balls and a couple of stalks of celery cut into inch pieces. Cover with another layer of tomato and over all pour a cupful of hot water in which a round of tablespoonful of butter has been melted. The January Delineator.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

There has recently returned to our midst from the Province of Saskatchewan one of our former residents, in the person of Mr. John J. Fellows. About four years ago Mr. Fellows went west to engage in farming. His venture proved very successful, and this summer he sold the farm he had acquired at a very large profit. Mr. Fellows' correspondent assures us—regarded as a very desirable citizen and a very practical farmer in the district in which he settled, and his neighbors viewed with much regret his departure for the east. They are confident that the call of the west will be strong upon Mr. Fellows that he will return before a very long time has elapsed. Mr. Fellows will be very pleased to give any information in his power to intending visitors to the west.

Yours sincerely,

H. BUTCHER.

The Best Flour.

Dafoe's Nonesuch. Dafoe's Manitoba Patent

By numerous tests by the best bakers the above mentioned grades have been proven to be the best foods in the market. Ask your grocer for Dafoe's Flour. Soldier's, and purchase your home milk, thereby producing clean and Sheets that you can purchase cheaper than the products of the Western mills, which has to be transported those miles and make at great expense, and usually when it reaches you is of inferior quality. The grocer complains if the farmer of the immediate south to Toronto or to outside points for an article to get at the home store just as good, but he does not hesitate to buy goods from mail order houses. Always insist upon having Dafoe's flour for your money rather than you can purchase the home article for every bag of which is guaranteed.

Chopped feed and Barbadoes Flour always on hand. Feed grinding a specialty, with the best mills known to the trade.

A full stock of the best Anthracite Coal also in the market for the purchase of all kinds of grain.

Ask for prices at the Big Mill, before purchasing your Flour, Feed or Coal.

A PRAYER.

If there be some weaker one
Give me strength to help him on.
If a blunder would there be Let me guide him nearer Thee
Make me mortal dream none true
Were the work I aim would do
Clothe with life the weak object
Let me be the thing I mean
Let me be the Ideal
Proper that chance is than seen
Out of self to Love be led
And to Heaven acclimated
Until all things sweet and good
Seem my natural habitude.

THE TEDDY BEARS' CHRISTMAS TREE

Christmas With The Pickwickians

The chronicler of Christmas deeds is doing it on comparatively a large scale, and look here has Dickens described them before in the "Pickwick Papers." Don't read the paragraph reading up reference of the holiday half dozen and not become weary. Just spin it every where the chapters devoted to the doing. From the beginning, when Mr. Wardle threw Pickwick and party without start for Dingley Dell, to the hour of their returns there to the early afternoon, [illegible] of not altogether as [illegible] and the four Pickwickians [illegible] of the 24 day [illegible] the hour of, crave in [illegible] the period of [illegible] and accumulated [illegible] was a new at least [illegible] and more honest. It was [illegible] hostility, merriment and [illegible] the old hour was pre-[illegible] and [illegible] guises now [illegible] set the [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] on the [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] horror that he cried out aloud and beat his steed into faster time with both hands and feet. To think of those two ruffians fighting over this girl as though she were the spoils of pillage! He must overtake the Kid—he would! The possibility that he might not forced him into such ungovernable mental chaos that he was forced to calm himself. He went and that is all. He could not think of it. That gasping creature in the roadhouse spoke all too well of the Bronco's determination. And yet, who of those who had known the Kid in the past would dream that his vileness was so utter as this?

Away to the right, hidden among the shadowed hills, his friends rested themselves for the coming battle, writhing impatiently his return and timing it to the rising sun. Down in the valley to his left were the two he followed, while he, obsessed and unreasoning, now cursing like a madman, now grim and silent, spurred southward toward town and into the ranks of his enemies.

CHAPTER XXI.

DAY was breaking as Glenister came down the mountain. With the first light he halted to rest from the trail, and, having no inkling of knowing that the fresh tracks he found were not those of the two riders he followed, he urged his lathered steed once more into a pace that suddenly ceased to be was very tired and had not slept for two days and nights.

The consideration did not prevent the prodigious, for he had only a weapon which would not kill in the closest manner not that there was work to do. Even the murderous speculation upon Kid Conway's undoubted recklessness, from the enemy which fell upon him wherever he thought of Helen—upon Sheridan, Stillman, Moosejaw, pounding at his massive shoulders, plunged onward toward the east of Moose, now growing gray in the first dawn.

It seemed ages since Roy had seen the moonlight on Kid Conway's head with whom he had been endlessly long. His only was fast beneath the straits, and yet he made no longer to fear that he had sung his eyes set toward the sea, his mind a store of formless, whirling thoughts, and his body racked with the unbending determination.

He knew that he had sacrificed all that remained to him and that the hope of Helen was gone, in fact, he had to realize dimly that from the moment he left Moose Jaw he had been hoping her that she had never been meant for him and that he had been a fool to think so. But a little while he was to find himself. In the final conclusion, he had been content only that he had to be near Helen and to know that she was safe. Whether she loved him or not was the result of the circumstances he considered quite secondary. Only he had to see her and know a riddle to him, and many blinds curiously. His blind, his mind, his heart and his soul no longer the physiology of a manikin; but to what the outcome would be when he was quite sure, Roy could not tell. Apparently McNamara should never have fallen. Roy believed his mission to be that of a guardian angel and a messenger from the Bronco Kid. When he had finished, he would pay the penalty for his deeds to escape, he would go back to his life and his sufferings. If he did not, his future would be in the hands of his enemies.

He reached the silent streets unobserved, for the miners were heavy and kept awake only by the occasional cry in the still air. The rain had ceased, leaving batten down the waves which rumbled against the beach, filling the air with their subdued thunder. A ship anchored in the offing, and Roy, in from the fog of Shadow Island with the whole left side foul with oil, knew by whom a leader was rising and falling. His eyes flashing like fire, uttered feebly and a new impact crawling upon the surface of the ocean.

He rode down Front street heedless of danger, heedless of the comment his appearance might create, and, unseen, entered the enemy's stronghold. He passed a gambling hall, through the windows of which came a sickly yellow gleam. A man came out unsteadily and stared at the horseman, then passed on.

Glenister's plan was to go straight to the Northern and from there to track down its owner relentlessly, but in order to reach the place his course led him past the office of Denham & Struve. This brought back to his mind the man dying out there ten miles at his back. The scanted humanity demanded that assistance be sent at once. Yet he dared not give word openly, thus betraying his presence, but it was necessary that he maintain his liberty during the next hour at all hazards. He suddenly thought of an expedient and reined in his horse, which stopped with wide spread legs and drooped head while he dismounted and climbed the stairs to leave a note upon the door. Some one would see the message shortly and recognize its urgency.

In dressing for the battle at the Mine on the previous night he had regarded his leather boots with "cork lifts," which are waterproof, light and pliable footgear made from the skin of seal and walrus. He was thus able to move as noiselessly as though in moccasins. Finding neither pencil nor paper in his pocket, he tried the outer door of the office, to find it unlocked. He stepped inside and listened, then moved toward a table on which were writing materials, but in doing so heard a rustle in Struve's private office. Evidently his stiff soles had not disturbed the man inside. Roy was about to tiptoe out as he had come when the hidden man cleared his throat. It is in these involuntary sounds that the voice retains its natural quality more distinctly even than in speaking. A strange eagerness grew in Glenister's face, and he approached the partition stealthily. It was of wood and glass, the panes clouded and opaque to a height of some six feet; but, stepping upon a chair, he peered into the room beyond. A man knelt in a litter of papers before the safe, its drawers and compartments removed and their contents scattered. The watcher lowered himself, drew his gun and laid soft hand upon the doorknob, turning the latch with firm fingers. His vengeance had come to meet him.

After lying in wait during the long night, certain that the vigilantes would spring his trap, McNamara was astounded at news of the battle at the Mines and of Glenister's success. He stormed and cursed his men as cowards. The judge became greatly exercised over this new development, which, coupled with his night of long anxiety, reduced him to a pitiful hysteria.

"They'll blow us up next. Great heavens! Dynamite! Oh, that is barbarous. For heaven's sake, get the soldiers out, Clyde!"

"Ay, we can use them now." Thereupon McNamara roused the commanding officer at the post and requested him to assume a troop and have them ready to march at daylight, then he startled the judge to start the wheels of his court and invoke this military aid in regular fashion.

"Make it all a matter of record," he said. "We want to keep our skirts clear from now on."

"The Bronco people are against us," quavered Stillman. "They'll tear us to pieces."

"Let them try. Once I get my hand on the ringleader, the rest may riot and be damned."

And when he had made less display than had the judge, the receiver was no less worried about Helen, of whom no news had come. His anxiety was red heat by the discovery of her earlier defection, was enhanced fourfold by the thought of this latest adventure. Something told him there was treachery afoot, and when she did not appear at breakfast he feared that she had cast in her lot with the rioters. This aroused a perfect delirium of doubt and dismay until he reasoned further that Struve, having gone with her, must also be a traitor. He recognized the enormity of this, but kept down the man's senility, so began to reckon carefully its significance. What could Struve profit by? What over had Mc-Namara started and, seizing his hat, hurried straight to the lawyer's office and let himself in with the key he had cribbed. It was light enough for him to decipher the characters on the safe before he turned the combination, and he set to work scanning the endless bundles piled in it. Finding that after all the man had taken with him no important papers, he left the office without comment and went to the hotel, where he found Helen's room empty, but the result of the investigation he revealed with a shock of surprise. Mc-Namara, and knew

WHY SUFFER?

BREATHE HYOMEI AND KILL THE LOATHSOME CATARRH GERMS.

Just as long as you have catarrh your nose will itch, your breath will be foul, you will hawk and spit and you will do other disgusting things because you can't help yourself. The germs of catarrh have got you in their power; they are continually and persistently digging into and irritating the mucous membrane of your nose and throat. They are now making your life miserable—in time they will sap your entire system of its energy, its strength, its vigor and vitality.

But there is one remedy that will kill the germs, and cure catarrh, and that is Hyomei, the Australian dry air treatment.

Joseph Dural, of Woodstock Street Tavistock, Ont., says: Catarrh had it given me all kinds of suffering for a long time. There was a swelling of the glands under the ears and other ailment to my nose and the discharges would drop into my throat. I was also troubled with headaches, but never got the relief that I did from Booth's Hyomei. I have been so pleased with Hyomei results that I highly recommend it to cure catarrh quickly.

T. B. Wallace, the druggist, will guarantee Hyomei to cure catarrh or money back. Don't delay this plan, ant antiseptic treatment. Breathe in Hyomei and kill the germs.

T. B. Wallace will sell you a complete Hyomei outfit, including inhaler, for only $1.00. If ever in need attend to cure bronchitis, asthma, coughs, colds, has been and a cup better.

Persons may join the Club at any time during the term, but must do all answer questions hereinafter explained, to qualify for the prizes. It is, however, desirable that the questions be answered as the lessons are studied.

The International Newspaper Bible Study Club is for the purpose of promoting, in an unsectarian way among the members, the study of the Bible, the basis of which shall be the lessons of the Sunday school (International), and the Bible.

Any one may join a Local Club, and take up the simple course herein outlined, having no ordained clergymen. We have the sympathetic co-operation of the latter, but it is not considered fair to have them compete for the prizes. Sunday school teachers, Bible class scholars, and church-goers generally, may belong to this Bible Study Club, also non-churchgoers, of whatever kind of opinion. All such are hereby not joined are warmly invited to do so and to compete for the prizes.

The International Newspaper Bible Study Club reserves the right to publish the International Sunday School Lesson questions by Rev. Dr. Ellsworth, which have aroused so much interest elsewhere, and will appear weekly. One of these questions each week is to be answered in writing, and upon these answers the prizes are to be awarded.

The Beaver is authorized to form a Local Newspaper Bible Study Club for its readers, and invites them to do so and join, and fulfil the conditions, that everything possible may be done to make it a success.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

GONE FOREVER

Out on the wind-swept mountain-
Under the star gleamed sky,
Wandered a lonely young stranger,
Far from his home to die.

Keen was the breath of autumn,
Out on the snow clad plains,
Out in Kenora hospital,
Lost was his sense of pain

Back to the scenes of childhood
Wandered his clouded mind,
Dreaming of home and loved ones
Left ever more behind.

Fever was the friend that led him
On to his hopeless end.
Far in an unknown country,
Dying without a friend.

Cold and silent in death is Fred.
And never more to roam;
His parents will miss him sadly,
And his empty chair at home.

Farewell, they say, dear Fred,
From you we all must part,
But hope to meet you in Heaven,
With your lonely heart.

—Ruth Lloyd, Northbrook, Ont.

IN LOVING MEMORY

of the late Mr. John Manion, Selby, who departed this life Oct. 23d, 1907.

Kindest darling, loving father,
From you to Heaven has gone,
May we be prepared to meet him,
When life's journey here is done.

In this world of trials and troubles,
Where we are left alone,
To prepare to meet our father
At God's holy, holy throne.

All kindness and attention
That father could bestow,
Oh, if we could have kept him,
But our father had to go.

O relentless messatorium
Take him safely over all sea,
And through thy intercession
Let us unite in eternity.

MRS. L. A. BETTS.

Brockville Times.

Caroline Chisholm, the beloved wife of Rev. L. A. Betts, Brockville's veteran supernumerated clergyman, passed away yesterday morning in the General Hospital following an illness of only six days with acute pneumonia. The announcement will be a painful surprise to a host of friends of the venerable couple in Brockville and through-out Eastern Ontario and will be a matter for deep sorrow in many homes as both Mr. and Mrs. Betts enjoyed a wide and favorable acquaintance with a very strong little woman. Mrs. Betts was ever full of energy and activity in her daily pursuits and but a week ago she contracted pneumonia in a severe form and was removed to the General Hospital for treatment. It was apparent that the case was a serious one and not withstanding skilled medical attendance and tender nur-ing, Mrs. Betts finally succumbed, passing in a long rest at 8.15 yesterday morning.

The deceased was born at Bellville, and was therefore of age last July. She was married to Mr. Betts on January 23rd, 1861, forty-six years ago, in the Township of Sidney, Hastings County, by the late Rev. Michael Fawcett. Mr. Betts had then entered upon the duties of the ministry and during the years of his active labored in almost every town and hamlet in Eastern Ontario until Mr. Betts arrived at the age of superannuation and took up his residence in Brockville about twenty years ago. The deceased could recall many interesting reminiscences of pioneer ministerial life in these parts, attended as they were with trying and exacting experiences, but the hardships such as these she endured the present day. She shirked the work of Mr. Betts in a courageous manner and all through life proved herself a worthy helpmate. Among her accomplishments she has enjoyed the highest esteem, possessing the qualities of head and heart which made of her a true Christian wife. Her death is a severe blow to Mr. Betts, who will feel her bereavement deeply after a continuous residence of more than half a century. Results of hearing have greatly impaired. Mrs. Betts proved a valuable aid.

Four sons mourn the loss of a loving mother. They are James, of Niagara Falls, Rev. Frederick Albert, Alta., George, of Winnipeg, and Rev. W. A. Betts, of Lake Beach, Ont. She also leaves three sisters and three brothers. Mrs. Crawford and Mrs. Faulkner, of Bellville, and another sister resides in Wellington. Hastings County, and Gilbert E. and A. C. Chisholm.

CHRISTMAS PASTORAL.

To the Members of the Church of England in the Diocese of [illegible]

Dear Brethren:—Once again the glad season when we commemorate the birth of our Lord into this world of mankind, with its good intentions is drawing near. It has always been a time of gladness and happiness, but never so great as when all seem to feel an unwonted glow a season when it is customary and fitting to remember the great joy, good will amongst men. May I ask you at this time to remember Him who ministers to you in holy things, to see that your Christmas is a Christian one, and that the Christ-mas gifts be not unduly multiplied to the injury of the Church and especially will it be so this year on account of the great drain on the part of the grants from the Mission Fund and the withdrawal all together of others. Give as God has prospered you, and you will be richer by so doing. For He will count your offering as made to Himself.

Do not miss attendance at Church for your family Communion be present and sacrificial by a loving and thankful approach to the Lord's Table, that the benediction of the Son of the Highest may rest upon you, and the peace of God may fill your hearts.

Wishing you a very happy Christmas, and praying that God may have you in His Holy keeping, and fill you with joy and peace in believing.

Your faithful friend and Bishop,

THE YOUNG LAURIER.

His Oratorial Powers Once Earned Him an Interruption.

In the course of a lecture delivered recently in Montreal before the Bar Association, the Hon. Mr. Justice Lemieux related an interesting incident connected with the early life of one of Canada's most prominent public men of to-day. The lecturer, who, by the way, does not belong to the Laurier family of which the Postmaster-General is a member, took for his subject the late Mr. Justice Ramsay, who for many years was a judge in the Court of Queen's Bench, the highest court in the province of Quebec. He was not only a seignior of broad culture and of high literary attainments. But he was also noted for his temper, which was very short and equally hot, so much so that embarrassed lawyers were afraid of him. And to young lawyers he was simply a terror. In fact, he was something of a janitrical martinet.

One day many years ago an appeal from the district of Arthabaska came up for hearing before the full Bench of which Judge Ramsay was a member. The advocate for the appellant was young and striking in appearance. His handsome head almost reached his collar, and his gestures were the very expression of grace. But still more remarkable was his fluency and at times his bursts of polished eloquence.

The court listened with close attention, but finally Judge Ramsay's patience gave out. That was not his style of speaking he cared for, especially in a court of appeal. More than all, less eloquence, was to his taste. He stopped the young pleader and warned him to be more brief and, in fact, he interrupted so frequently and with such heat that the lawyer brought it down hurriedly to a close and sat down.

It is related that a fellow judge Mr. Justice Monk, father of the present member of the House of Commons for Jacques Cartier, and a kind-hearted and genial a man as ever sat upon the Bench, leaned over and whispered to Judge Ramsay "Why did you stop the young man? It was a pleasure to hear him speak." That young lawyer was Mr. Wilfrid Laurier of Arthabaskaville, now Sir Wilfrid and Prime Minister of Canada.

On the following day the bookseller's young lawyer received at the hands of Judge Ramsay a second surprised, for the court had decided in his client's favor and the decision was rendered by Judge Ramsay who said the same day would not bear the bleader out.

It is a long time now since Wilfrid was stopped in the midst of an address.

Pictorial Grain Loading.

A striking representation of the method of loading grain from the Fort William elevators is to be seen here is afforded at the Charing Cross windows of the Canadian Government Emigration Offices in London. Reproduced from a photograph the scene is most realistic, and large crowds gather round the window to see the mechanical workings of the ingenious arrangement. By means of belting which operates behind the picture wheat is to be seen pouring out of the elevators into a modelled steamer lying in the blue waters outside the port. At night-time the buildings in which the elevators are fixed are illuminated, and the scene presented, amidst the usual display of minerals, woods, cereals, and mounted birds, which have for some months been features in the window is picturesquely attractive. The admiring crowds have been so great that the police on occasion have been compelled to keep the people moving. It may be stated that grain is turned out of the elevators at Port William at the rate of 80,000 bushels an hour. The four or five elevators have a carrying capacity of from 2 to 7-12 million bushels, said an official of the Canadian Government to a representative of The Standard of Empire. The total capacity of the combined elevators is 23 million bushels.

"My youngest boy, 3 years old, was sick with fever last June, and when he got better the doctor prescribed Scott's Emulsion, and he liked it so well that he drank it out of the bottle, and is now just as plump and strong as any child of his age anywhere . . . two bottles fixed him O.K."—MR. JOHN F. TEDDER, Box 263, Teague-Freestone Co., Texas.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

is the greatest help for babies and young children there is. It just fits their needs: it just suits their delicate, sensitive natures; they thrive on it. Just a little does them so much good and saves you so much worry. You owe it to them and yourself to make them as strong and healthy as possible. SCOTT'S EMULSION will help you better than anything else; be sure to get SCOTT'S. It's the best, and there are so many worthless imitations.

A Boon to the Bilious

Are you compelled to deny yourself many wholesome foods because you think they make you bilious? Do you know that your condition is more to blame than the foods? Your liver and stomach need attention more than the diet. When you find yourself suffering with a bilious attack, take and all distressing symptoms will disappear. They settle the stomach, regulate the liver and exert a wonderful influence upon the whole system. Their good effects are felt immediately.

Beecham's Pills mingle with the juices of the stomach and thus make a work of digestion. The nourishing properties of the food are more readily assimilated and the blood carried off without irritation to the stomach or clogging the liver.

Beecham's Pills should be taken whenever there is sick headache, coated tongue, constipation, sallow skin or any symptoms that indicate an inactive liver.

"So this is the end,—and I gave him to her with my own hands. He held them out before him curiously, becoming conscious for the first time that the left one was swollen and discolored and fearfully painful. He noted it with impersonal interest, realizing its need of medical attention, as left the cabin and walked down into the city. He encountered Dextry and Simms on the way, and they went with him, both flowing with the gaiety of the camp.

"Loot, but you're the talk of the town," they began. "The curio hunters have removed to pull Struve's office apart for souvenirs, and the Swedes want to run you for congress as soon as ever you get admitted as a state. They say that at collar an' elbow knots you could lick any of them eastern contractors and thereafter cast a lot of good legislation for us cripples up here."

"Speakin' of laws goes to show me that this here country is gettin' too blamed civilized for a white man," said Simms pessimistically, "and now that this fight is ended up it don't look like there would be anything doin' fit to chain the interest of a grizzled up person for a long while. I'm goin' west."

"West! Why, you can throw a stone into fifteen straight claims here," said Boyd, smiling.

"Oh, well, the world's round. There's a schooner outfittin' for Silvery—two years' cruise. Me an' Dex is figgerin' on gettin' out toward the frontier for a spell."

"Sure," said Dextry. "I'm beginnin' to feel all cramped up hereabouts—only I'm more philosophically up here on French restaurants and such discrepancies of scenery. They're puttin' a new set in Q. M., with Emilia a shoe shinin' parlor opened up. Why, I'd like to get where I could stretch at ease without stumblin' into a business of some dude in a dress suit. Better come along, Reg; we can sell out the Midas."

"I'll think it over," said the young man.

The night was bright with a full moon when they left the doctor's office. Roy, in no mood for the exuberance of his companions, parted from them as he had not gone far before he met Cherry Malotte. His head was low, and he did not see till she spoke.

"Well, boy, so it's over at last."

Her words chimed so perfectly with his thoughts that he replied, "Yes; it's all over, little girl."

"You don't mind my congratulations now you know we're all for that. How does it feel to be a winner?"

"I don't know. I've lost."

"Lost what?"

"Everything—except the gold mine."

"Everything except—I see! You mean that she—that you have asked her, and she won't?" He never knew the cost at which she held her voice so steady.

"More than that. It's so new that it hurts yet, and it will continue to hurt for a long time, I suppose. But to-morrow I am going back to my hills and my valleys, back to the Midas and my work, and try to begin all over. For a time I've wandered in strange paths, seeking new gods, as it were, but the dazzle has died out of my eyes and I can see true again. She isn't for me, although I shall always love her. I'm sorry I can't forget as quickly as some do. I shall go back and take an interest in things. But what about you? Where shall you go?"

"I don't know. It doesn't really matter—now." The dusk hid her white, set face, and she spoke monotonously. "I am going to see the Bronco Kid. He sent for me. He's ill."

"He's not a bad sort," said Roy. "And I suppose he'll make a new start too."

"Perhaps," said she, gazing far out over the glacier peaks. "It all depends." After a moment she added, "What a pity that we can't all sponge off the slate and begin afresh and—forget!"

"It's part of the game," said he. "I don't know why it's so, but it is. I'll see you sometimes, won't I?"

"No, boy; I think not."

"I believe I understand," he murmured, "and perhaps it's better so." He took her two soft hands in his one good right and kissed them. "God bless you and keep you, dear, brave little Cherry."

She stood straight and still as he melted into the shadows, and only the moonlight heard her pitiful sob and her hopeless whisper.

"Goodby, my boy, my boy."

He wandered down beside the sea, for his battle was not yet won, and until he was surer of himself he could not endure the ribaldry and rejoicing of his fellows. A welcome lay waiting for him in every public place, but no one there could know the mockery of it, so one could gauge the desolation that was his.

The sand, wet, packed and hard as a pavement, gave no sound to his careless steps, and thus it was that he came silently upon the one woman as she stood beside the silver surf. Had he seen her first he would have slunk past in the landward shadows, but, recognizing all but her manner changed abruptly. Coming closer she touched them with caressing fingers.

"It's nothing—nothing at all," he said while his voice jumped out of all control. "When are you—going away?"

"I do not know—not for some time."

He had supposed she would go to-morrow with her uncle and—the other, to be with them through their travail.

With warm impetuosity she began: "It was a noble thing you did to-day. Oh, I am glad and proud."

"I prefer you to think of me in that way, rather than as the wild beast you saw this morning, for I was mad, perfectly mad with hatred and revenge, and every wild impulse that comes to a defeated man. You saw, I had played and lost, played and lost, again and again, till there was nothing left. What misfortune brought you there? It was a terribly brutal thing, but you can't understand."

"But I can understand. I do. I know all about it now. I know the wild rage of desperation; I know the exultation of victory; I know what hate and fear are now. You told me once that the wilderness had made you a savage, and I laughed at it just as I did when you said that my contact with big things would teach me the truth, that we're all alike, and that those motives are in us all. I see now that you were right and I was very simple. I learned a great deal last night."

"I have learned much also," said he, "at which you laugh, dark one."

"I—I don't think I could teach you any more," she hesitated.

He moved as though to speak, but held back and tore his eyes away from her.

"Well?" she inquired, gazing at him covertly.

"Once, a long time ago, I read a love's problem, and ever since learning you I have made the constant prayer that I might be given the purity to be worthy the gods' gift, and that you might be granted the patience to reach the good in me, but it's no use. But at least I'm glad we have met on common ground, as it were, and that you understand, in a measure. The prayer could not be answered; but through it I have found myself and I have known you. That last is worth more than a king's ransom to me. It is a holy thing which I shall reverence always, and when you go you will leave me lonely except for remembrance."

"But I am not going," she said. "That is—unless—"

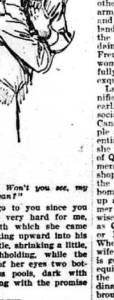
Something in her voice swept his gaze back from the shimmering canyon way that rippled seaward to the rising moon. The night flew through into his throat, and he shook as though seized by a great fear.

"Unless—what?"

"Unless you want me to."

"Oh, God! don't play with me!" He flung out his hand as though to stay her while his voice died out to a supplicating hoarseness. "I can't stand that."

"Don't you see? Won't you see?" she asked. "I was waiting here for



"Don't you see? Won't you see, my pagan?"

the courage to go to you since you have been so very hard for me, my pagan." With which she came close to him, looking upward into his tortured face, shrinking not at all, but yielding yet withholding, while the moonlight made of her eyes two bottomless, boundless pools, dark with love, and brimming with the promise of his dreams.

THE END.

Telephones and Fires.
The earliest application of the telephone in connection with a switchboard was made at Bridgeport, Conn., in June, 1878, when in the case of an outbreak of various fire companies to arrive first at fires, the men of company No. 5, which was next to the telephone office, told the telephone operator to request his twenty-one patrons to give the information over the telephone of their fire and to report the fact at the engine house. This engine was not only the first at several fires, but a mysterious manner was frequently on its way before the alarm struck.

This result led in turn to the occasion of a small fire in a dwelling, which the fire company attended with muffled bells in response to a telephone message, and no fire alarm was pulled. On their return, the engine was driven by the noise of a rival company with bell ringing, and when the men rushed out with inquiries they were told that the fire had been extinguished.

After this occurrence, the chief of the fire department gave orders that companies should not respond to a fire alarm received over a telephone, but the insurance agents of the city applauded the action, and it was agreed that all fire engine houses should be equipped with telephones.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Feast of Yule.

It was Pope Telesphorus, who died before the year 150 A. D., who instituted Christmas as a festival, though for some time it was irregularly kept in December, April and May. But for centuries before there had been a feast of Yule among the northern nations, whose great enjoyment was in drinking the wassail bowl or cup. Nothing gave them so much delight as indulgence in "carousing ale," especially at the season of short days, when fighting was ended. It was likewise the custom at all their feasts "for the master of the house to fill a large bowl or pitcher, to drink out of it first himself and then give to him that sat next, and so it went around." This may have been the origin of that popular American custom known as "treating."

Flattered Him.

"I did flatter him."

"Flattered him? Why, you told him he was half a fool!"

"Well, wasn't that flattering him?"

CANADA'S FIRST LADY

WRITER DESCRIBES LADY GREY AND HER PERSONALITY.

Governor-General's Wife Has Many Hobbies, But All Are Philanthropic —She Is an Enthusiastic Supporter of the Work of the Salvation Army and Is Deeply Interested in Home Industries In Canada.

Margaret B. Downing, a well-known writer, contributes to a number of American newspapers a new sketch of Lady Grey, wife of Earl Grey, Canada's Governor-General. The sketch is written from Ottawa and among other things contains the following:

Lady Grey has been accused of possessing many hobbies, but they are all on the side of philanthropy. Like all grande dames of the older world, she takes the duties of her position seriously. She assumed that the obligation to look after the physical and moral well-being of those under her is part of her life obligations, and consequently she has taken up the work, if not with the loud flourish of trumpets, as did the Countess of Aberdeen, at least as systematically and enthusiastically.

Lord Grey has two hobbies, religion revival, notably Salvation Army endeavor and temperance reform. Lady Grey is just as enthusiastic, though she cannot assume the leadership of such movements. She makes frequent visits to the camps of the Booth cohorts and she takes part in the exhortations, not in the form of set speeches or in the general assemblies, but quietly and personally, as it were to a few auditors. She belongs to almost every form of municipal or charitable association established in Canada. It is said of her that she is somewhat lax about her social obligations, but about her philanthropic ones never. In this regard she has distributed her favors impartially among French and Indian Catholics, Presbyterians, Scotch and Welsh Methodists, that mysterious sect, the Doukhobors, the semi-civilized denizens of the Pacific slope and fashionable charities of the large Canadian cities, Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec.

Lady Grey has patronized the home industries of the Dominion and has given an impetus to native production. Though in London she is one of the cynosures of the handsomest-powned women of Mayfair, in Ottawa she finds all clothes distasteful, and prefers dainty and millinery there or in Montreal. Not a garment comes from the other side and she employs a small army of needlewomen on her lingerie and lace. Her gifts to friends in England or on the continent have taken the form of Canadian products, the dainty embroidery at which the French nuns or the French gentlewomen excel, the intricate but gracefully designed native lace, and the exquisite jewelry of delicate enamel.

Lady Grey, though reserved and dignified, as becomes the wife of a belted earl, and the queen of such a vast social domain as the Dominion of Canada, moves freely among the people and is known and beloved by the entire poorer class of Ottawa, where she lives the better part of the month of Quebec where she spends the summers, and in Montreal, her favorite shopping point. At home and at all the ceremony which pertains to the homes of British titled officials to lend up and the same is true of the summer palace near Quebec. But otherwise, Lady Grey moves among the people as Queen Alexandra does in London or Mrs. Roosevelt, in Washington. When she appears in public, as the wife of King Edward's pro-consul she is gowned in becoming state and her equipage would warm the heart of the most ardent lover of pomp. Ordinarily she drives around in a small brougham, guiltless of emblazoned arms or liveried coachmen, and she wears raiment as severe as a nun's. Lady Grey is dedicated to the cause of temperance, but her endeavors are far removed from some of the intemperate propagandas which pass current. She avoids the hopeless neighborhoods for her crusade, which never takes the form of total abstinence, but is rather to provide the best deleteriors form of stimulant to the poor. She is in favor of establishing neighboring stores where good beer and light wines of the unadulterated kind and the best brands of whisky will be sold at low figure. The entire neighborhood is to be given opportunity to get drink in such stores, where they are to be made responsible not only for the good conduct of the establishment but the quality of goods sold and the way it is sold. Lady Grey has not realized the hope of getting these co-operatives stores in running order, but she is doing woman work in this direction. She rarely spends her time getting converts to her cause to take the pledge of total abstinence but she is eloquent in getting them to aid her in closing disorderly places, where drink is sold and where the pennies of unfortunate men and women are spent to their own misery and the privation of their families.

Gold In Alberta.

Reports of a rich gold strike near Battle Lake, in the Wetaskiwin branch of the C.P.R. were received in Edmonton recently. Five men of that district have filed prior claims, and they say the indications of gold are good. The gold was discovered by George Paterson, an old Yukon prospector, on his homestead west of Sedgewick on Battle creek. He says it is a glacial deposit. The gold-bearing area is supposed to be twenty miles long, and the channel about 100 feet below the surface. The bed of the creek is massive, which increases the difficulty of mining.

Edmonton is now the centre of the Gaelic settlements, denouncing Tory corruption. He had an intense, fervid and quaint style of English eloquence, with the high-keyed voice of the Highland lecturer, and much of he denounced them, his magnetism was such that even the bad and unlearned Tories liked it. On occasion that he had been a reporter on The Globe and in the gallery of the Legislature and had won a wide acquaintanceship and popularity with the members of both parties. His alert mind and ready wit, together with his tact and personality, made him welcome in any company.

Many stories have been told of Mowat's nine rebuffs and how Lady Grey, wife of Earl Grey, Canada's Governor-General. The sketch is written from Ottawa and among other things contains the following:

Lady Grey has been accused of possessing many hobbies, but they are all on the side of philanthropy. Like all grande dames of the older world, she takes the duties of her position seriously. She assumed that the obligation to look after the physical and moral well-being of those under her is part of her life obligations, and consequently she has taken up the work, if not with the loud flourish of trumpets, as did the Countess of Aberdeen, at least as systematically and enthusiastically.

Lord Grey has two hobbies, religion revival, notably Salvation Army endeavor and temperance reform. Lady Grey is just as enthusiastic, though she cannot assume the leadership of such movements. She makes frequent visits to the camps of the Booth cohorts and she takes part in the exhortations, not in the form of set speeches or in the general assemblies, but quietly and personally, as it were to a few auditors. She belongs to almost every form of municipal or charitable association established in Canada. It is said of her that she is somewhat lax about her social obligations, but about her philanthropic ones never. In this regard she has distributed her favors impartially among French and Indian Catholics, Presbyterians, Scotch and Welsh Methodists, that mysterious sect, the Doukhobors, the semi-civilized denizens of the Pacific slope and fashionable charities of the large Canadian cities, Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec.

Lady Grey has patronized the home industries of the Dominion and has given an impetus to native production. Though in London she is one of the cynosures of the handsomest-powned women of Mayfair, in Ottawa she finds all clothes distasteful, and prefers dainty and millinery there or in Montreal. Not a garment comes from the other side and she employs a small army of needlewomen on her lingerie and lace. Her gifts to friends in England or on the continent have taken the form of Canadian products, the dainty embroidery at which the French nuns or the French gentlewomen excel, the intricate but gracefully designed native lace, and the exquisite jewelry of delicate enamel.

Lady Grey, though reserved and dignified, as becomes the wife of a belted earl, and the queen of such a vast social domain as the Dominion of Canada, moves freely among the people and is known and beloved by the entire poorer class of Ottawa, where she lives the better part of the month of Quebec where she spends the summers, and in Montreal, her favorite shopping point. At home and all the ceremony which pertains to the homes of British titled officials to lend up and the same is true of the summer palace near Quebec. But otherwise, Lady Grey moves among the people as Queen Alexandra does in London or Mrs. Roosevelt, in Washington. When she appears in public, as the wife of King Edward's pro-consul she is gowned in becoming state and her equipage would warm the heart of the most ardent lover of pomp. Ordinarily she drives around in a small brougham, guiltless of emblazoned arms or liveried coachmen, and she wears raiment as severe as a nun's. Lady Grey is dedicated to the cause of temperance, but her endeavors are far removed from some of the intemperate propagandas which pass current. She avoids the hopeless neighborhoods for her crusade, which never takes the form of total abstinence, but is rather to provide the best deleteriors form of stimulant to the poor. She is in favor of establishing neighboring stores where good beer and light wines of the unadulterated kind and the best brands of whisky will be sold at low figure. The entire neighborhood is to be given opportunity to get drink in such stores, where they are to be made responsible not only for the good conduct of the establishment but the quality of goods sold and the way it is sold. Lady Grey has not realized the hope of getting these co-operatives stores in running order, but she is doing woman work in this direction. She rarely spends her time getting converts to her cause to take the pledge of total abstinence but she is eloquent in getting them to aid her in closing disorderly places, where drink is sold and where the pennies of unfortunate men and women are spent to their own misery and the privation of their families.

Gold In Alberta.

Reports of a rich gold strike near Battle Lake, in the Wetaskiwin branch of the C.P.R. were received in Edmonton recently. Five men of that district have filed prior claims, and they say the indications of gold are good. The gold was discovered by George Paterson, an old Yukon prospector, on his homestead west of Sedgewick on Battle creek. He says it is a glacial deposit. The gold-bearing area is supposed to be twenty miles long, and the channel about 100 feet below the surface. The bed of the creek is massive, which increases the difficulty of mining.

Edmonton is now the centre of the Gaelic settlements, denouncing Tory corruption. He had an intense, fervid and quaint style of English eloquence, with the high-keyed voice of the Highland lecturer, and much of he denounced them, his magnetism was such that even the bad and unlearned Tories liked it. On occasion that he had been a reporter on The Globe and in the gallery of the Legislature and had won a wide acquaintanceship and popularity with the members of both parties. His alert mind and ready wit, together with his tact and personality, made him welcome in any company.

on the bear's soot as compared with the fur of the Polar Biped. In the case of an ordinary-sized black bear a footprint measuring nine or ten inches is about the average. But when an animal that can make an 18-inch track goes roaming around it is little wonder that few Squamish residents do much traveling around now without a rifle of heavy calibre.

Her Little Toes Cut Off.

A few days ago the discovery was made upon the death of Mlle. La Blanche, who died of injuries received while performing at the Toronto Exhibition, which showed how typically French she was. Her costume as an acrobat demanded that she wear the dainty painted French shoes which have become so customary that the public demand them. Mlle. La Blanche, in order that she might wear the little shoes and conform to custom, had had the little toe of each foot removed.

Relic Hunters Balked.

An offer of $2,500 has been made to the rector and church wardens of Framlingham Church, Suffolk, England, for a tilting helmet which hangs over the tomb of the Duke of Norfolk, who was the hero of Flodden Field, but the present duke has notified the authorities that it must not be removed.

Canadian Finds Cure.

A Canadian claims to have discovered a cure and preventive of seasickness, and Col. Labelle is mentioned in The London Express as having tried the treatment during the recent voyage across the Atlantic on himself and the Bisley team, finding it most efficacious.

Something Just as Good.

Long Helps—Port Credit, Ont., attained the dignity of a summer resort, it was known to the owners of small yachts as a snug harbor, but a poor place for obtaining provisions. Two citified young men—green hands—tied their yacht up at the dock, found a store with a small but highly assorted stock, and enquired for bread.

"I don't keep bread," said the general merchant; "likely you can get some from Pat Shelley, the shoemaker."

There was startling to the citified young men, but after all, there was no reason why the staff of life should not be associated with the manufacture of soles. Sugar was the next item, and promptly supplied. Then the storekeeper enquired:

"What did you say?" asked the storekeeper.

"Marmalade—marmalade," chorused the youthful pair.

The storekeeper carefully inspected a shelf devoted to patent medicine, liniment and similar things, then shook his head.

"Nope," he said. "I haven't got it. Fact is, I don't do much in medicines, but I can give you some oil or Scott's Emulsion."

Canadians In England.

The best notebook debater in the British House of Commons is a Canadian, Mr. Bonar Law, who fought the Government. He will shoot up at the end of a week's debate and without a single note before him, with only the fierce light of his eyeglass in the cold, bare top of the brass-bound box to encourage him, he will pick up one by one all the arguments of all his opponents on all the previous days, and will carefully, accurately, and crushingly answer them. But let some unwary Free Trader challenge one of Mr. Bonar Law's quotations. He has eight or nine pockets. Quick as thought he shows a hand into a pocket. Always the right pocket. He pulls out a cutting. Always the right cutting. He reads out an extract which makes the interrupter sorry he spoke.

Another superlative is Dr. Macnamara, also a Canadian. He is the brevity speaker in the House of Commons. It was a great pity they put him on the Government bench. The responsibility and office sometimes stifle the best things men can do in the way of debate. Yet he deserved the honor more than most.

A Western Serial.

The Regina Leader announces a new home-grown serial—no, not a western story. The Leader began to look round for a story to follow the one it was running serially. After examining several, the editors came to the conclusion that one written by a Regina author was better than the offerings of several eastern syndicates, and will appear accordingly. The West is beginning to show us that what is not the only thing it can produce.

THE POWER OF STEAM.

Many May See But It Takes Genius to Realize.

When James Watt saw the steam escaping from the kettle lid to bump up and down he said "There must be power in that steam that it can lift such a weight."

There was.

Millions prior to him had seen the same phenomenon and regarded it as an unexplained mystery.

Recent scientific research has put its finger on the "cause" of Dandruff, Falling Hair, and consequent Baldness, and has unearthed a tiny germ which eats the life from the roots of human hair.

Newbro's Herpicide destroys this germ and consequently restores this hair to its natural state.

Well, for goodness sake, Dorothy, what mischief are you up to now?

Why, mother, I'm not in any mischief; but you told me to keep an eye on the clock, and I want to wake it up.

HISTORICAL MEETING.

The next meeting of the Literary and Historical Society will be held in Odessa Methodist Church, on Friday evening, Dec. 29th, at 8 o'clock. Edward B. Ryan, who is one of the foremost newspaper correspondents in the Dominion, will give an address on "Birds and Birdlife" and some of his famous "Bird Pictures." The inner life of the noted writer should be very interesting to all of us. Mr. R. S. Herrington will give a paper on "The Heroines of Canadian History." This is another subject about which our knowledge is as a rule very limited. We usually think of Laura Secord as the only heroine worth mentioning in Canadian History. After hearing this paper you will probably agree Mr. Herrington has a wide field about which very little has been written, but one which should not lack for characters. The meeting is open for the public. Entrance free.

HOCKEY.

Shamrocks vs. Maple Leafs.

On Thursday evening of last week a hockey match took place between the strong Shamrock team and the Maple Leafs of Tamworth. The game was keenly contested and many brilliant plays were pulled off on both sides. M. Williams was in goal for the Shamrocks, while P. Wrigthill did likewise for the boys from Tamworth. Both men did nobly, and were swift and nimble on their feet. Rose and Saul opened the game with a rush up the ice on Shamrock goal, but Williams cleverly stopped the puck and passed to Piper, who with Doupe made a sensational rush down the enemy's line and scored first tally for the Shamrocks amidst great applause. Piper again came down the ice like a meteor and scored. Shamrocks 2, Maple Leafs 0. Play was worth woke up and began to play the game, in their old time form, Richardson notching No. 1 for his team, and five minutes later P. Barry evened the score with a pretty shot from off-side. P. Nolan and G. Deline then scored two more for Croydon by some pretty passing Harrager scored again for Croydon, and the game stood 5-2 in favor of the Irishmen. Then O'Brien and Wells began to rush things and soon so accurate that nothing seemed impossible for these the leather limbed heroes. In ten minutes they had shot the puck into the Shamrock net 3 times, and the score stood 5-5. Goal tender Williams proved himself master of the situation after that, turning aside shot after shot. Doupe, Piper and Quinn managed to get possession of the rubber and made a determined onslaught on Tamworth goal, but Nipper Weighill seemed to be everywhere, stopping some fighting shots. Just then Piper, Doupe and Rose were sent to the fence for slashing, followed a moment later by T. Quinn and Barry. After that they became listless, neither side scoring, and when referee Hughes blew his whistle the score stood 5 all. The teams were, Shamrocks—M. Williams, goal; G. Deline, point; G. Barringer, cover; J. Doupe, T. Quinn, H. Piper, and P. Nolan, forwards. Maple Leafs—Weighill, goal; Saul, point; Barry, cover; Rose, O'Brien, H. Richardson and L. Wells, forwards. Referee, A. Hughes. Timekeeper, B. Richardson.

THE maxim of many housewives is, "When in doubt blame the flour." This is unfair.

If your baking goes wrong, investigate—find the cause. Look to your stove, your yeast, your baking methods.

If you succeed in pinning the trouble down to the flour—if you clear yourself—then take up the flour question in dead earnest.

Consider that flour, to be successful from a baking standpoint, must be fine to produce light bread or pastry, pure to make that bread or pastry wholesome, and rich in nutriment to make it nourishing.

The good housewives all over the country are learning that has these three qualities in the greatest degree.

Ogilvie's Royal Household

Ogilvie's Royal Household is milled by the most modern méthods, purified by the only process that makes for absolute purity and made only from Manitoba Hard Wheat which contains the highest percentage of nutriment.

Royal Household Flour, in competent hands, never disappoints. Your grocer will guarantee this and gladly furnish the flour.

THE ARTISTIC PIRATES.

Yo ho! for the sail-swept Spanish Main,
Yo ho! for the pirate-grim,
With the shark adream on the weather beam
And the crew acrawling him!

"Art is Art!" quoth Gory Tim.
The gunner bold was he;
As he chewed the light of a bowline sight
Abaft of the larboard lee.

"I stick for Art!" says he again.
"But I likes it red an' gory."
With a fisherman's thumb cut off by gum?
I've drawed me many a story.

"I've drawed my gun in action, too,
An' at point-work I'm no dub;
I've painted in red to the foretops's head,
An' painted decks like Whistler's."

Quoth Scary Jake the bosun's mate,
As he—heaved the boarding-netting
"I, too, likes art—but a carving part.
In a rich vermilion setting!"

"But ho! there's a sail on our starboard bow," Cried the Captain. "Lads, look hearty!
'Tis a man-o'-war, and furthermore,
She'll eat us, a la carty!"

And that she did—and they all were swung
From a yard-arm, most unwilling
Quoth Jake to Tim, as they knotted him
"Their line-work, mate is killing!"

SECRET OF SUCCESS.

Lord Strathcona Declares It is Perseverance and Good Credit.

What is the secret of success? Lord Strathcona has expressed his views on the subject recently for The Standard.

Giving evidence in the Federal Court at New York in the United States Government's suit for the dissolution of the Standard Oil Co. which organization has made him the richest man in the world. Mr. John D. Rockefeller, on being asked the question: "What was the secret of your success?" replied: "We always had credit, we kept out of covenants, and we paid on our paper."

"I think Mr. Rockefeller is right," said Lord Strathcona. "Mr. Rockefeller, by credit, does not mean only money trust—he means the readiness to oblige, which is aroused in all men by strong and reliable characters. I think he is right, decidedly.

"What the message does not mention is Mr. Rockefeller's perseverance and his ability of seeing what not to undertake.

"Tell your young men and young women readers to keep perseverance before them every moment of their lives and to proceed slowly and surely. Opportunity does not make him frequently than to others. There are very few whom it does not visit at all. You have got to be ready for it. If you are not prepared, that's your fault. Work steadily for improvement, but don't gamble for it. Depend on your own efforts and don't wait for your friends."

The Old Spelling-Match.

The spelling-match, once the favorite arena of local learning in Canada, and the winter entertainment of many a countryside, has almost entirely disappeared. Perhaps country folk of to-day can spell as correctly as did their fathers and mothers, and much better than the average resident in city or town, but it is certain they do not get as much fun out of their knowledge of orthography as did the country folk of a generation ago. Then evening after evening throughout the long winter was spent in these battles over the words, the spelling team of one school being arrayed against that of another, and the contest aroused as much interest in the locality as a hockey match does to-day. The boy or girl (and it was usually the latter, for on the average the girls are better spellers than the boys), who "spelled down" in the school, or who stood up last in one of these district matches, was the hero of the hour and the wonder was "that one small head could carry all he knew."

While these spelling-matches appealed to the sporting spirit and to local pride and rivalry somewhat as athletic games do, it cannot be denied that they also appealed to the intellectual side and possessed valuable educational qualities.

In the Muskrat Cities.

The queer, oddly-shaped houses of the muskrats present a peculiar appearance along the banks of the Moonlake river in Peterboro County. In practically all the weed beds and marshes the muskrat cities are plentiful, and their funny houses, unusually high above water, are to be seen along the shores, like masses of hay. They almost resemble bee-hives, excepting that they are roughly finished in the exterior with protruding ends of rushes and marsh weeds. They are rounded on top, the rats gaining entrance from underneath. They are well made and warmly lined. In these rat-like cities of these queer abodes may be seen, and the rats should be very plentiful next spring when the season opens for their capture.

More Good Indians.

Ravages by bereavements among the Indians of Canada is indicated in the annual report of the Indian Affairs Department issued a few days ago. During the fiscal year ending last March the Indian population showed a net 110,000, a decrease of 40. The present year showed an increase of 169. To tuberculosis alone is the falling off attributed. The report notes that the Indians are becoming settled, and that the Reeve request the Honorable Minister to investigate this matter at his early at your convenience. Carried.

WESTERN SUFFRAGETTE.

Miss Binnie-Clark Wants Free Homesteads For Women Who Can Farm.

Western Canada is about to have a suffragette question as it were, of its own. The women of the Prairie provinces are not yet clamoring for votes. But some of them at least think that there ought to be certain changes in legislation which would prove materially advantageous to them. It has several times been pointed out that, among other things, the right of dower should be given to wives in the West, as it is to wives in the East.

And now comes another "woman's plea," from Fort Qu'Appelle, Saskatchewan. It is made by Miss Georgina Binnie-Clark, who suggests that the encouragement of free homesteads be given to women who have capital and energy. The writer has examined the homestead law and finds that a grant lands to a woman only if she is the sole head of a family; unmarried women cannot take up homesteads. Miss Binnie-Clark says that as the need of the West is women, the way to get them is to encourage them in the practical way. And she says: "As against all the male immigrants you have known to turn out failures, have you ever heard of an English woman immigrant failure?"

Miss Binnie-Clark is herself an English woman, and is making a success of farming in the West. Although this year has not been a very good one in her vicinity, she is able to pay off $1,000 on her land, besides having enough seed wheat for 100 acres next year, and enough produce to maintain her household until spring. She has only been in Saskatchewan three years and when she went she did not know barley from oats. This enterprising woman-farmer writes to The Canadian Gazette, of London, to urge that the Canadian Government encourage other English women to come out and do the same. She has had a number of inquiries from women, with some capital, who would like to make the experiment, and her suggestion is that twelve quarter-sections should be granted annually for three years to English women selected and approved by Mr. Obed Smith on behalf of the Canadian Government, and for the end to show whether there is a real need and a way of meeting it.

ANOTHER FAKER.

Arthur Stringer Is Out After Emerson Hough's "The Warrant."

Arthur Stringer will now include Emerson Hough and The Smart Set in his list of Canada fakers. The magazine, in announcing as one of its features for December a story by Mr. Hough dealing with the Canadian West, says:

"Canada has become, in the past few years, a favorite field for American novelists, who find in its historic features, its Old World leanings and its glistening, exhilarating winter life a constant source of inspiration. Emerson Hough, in his latest story, "The Warrant," published in the December Smart Set, has proved a most interesting S.B. Prowse are required to send by post prepaid to the undersigned, at Napanee, Ontario, Solicitor for the Administrator, Sexsmith, the administrator of the estate of William M. Sexsmith, on or before the 26th day of December, 1908, their christian and surnames, addresses and descriptions, with full particulars of their accounts and duly verified by statutory declaration. After the said last mentioned date the said administrator will proceed to distribute the assets of the said estate among the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims or demands of which shall then have received notice, and shall not be liable for the said assets or any part thereof to any person or persons whose claims or demands he has not received notice at the time of such distribution thereof.

T. M. WILSON,
Solicitor for the said Administrator.
Dated the 1st day of December, 1908.

story, which forms one of The Smart Set's features for the month."

The story is a good story in many ways, but the foregoing announcement will show that its publishers know about as much about Canada, east and west, as do the producers of such alleged Canadian plays as "Pierre of the Plains," etc.

A FAMOUS RUG.

China's Most Famous Bit of Carpet Destroyed by Fire In Toronto.

It will be remembered that during the Boxer troubles of 1900, Christian adventurer was disgraced by the looting of the Empress Dowager's palace in the inner city of Pekin by the troops of European nations. Afterwards this loot, containing all that was most precious in Chinese arts and crafts, was piled up in the public squares and accessible to the many adventurers that thronged the city. This was destined to have a sequel the right here in Toronto.

A few years ago there came to Toronto a dealer in curios and objects of art, and among the things he had for sale was a spun metal rug, which he declared was of Chinese workmanship and of great antiquity, although he did not know much about its history. He finally sold it to a firm of local architects who collect such things, for the sum of $40. They kept it in the office for months, and one of the partners became doubtful of its authenticity because it appeared so fresh in color and texture. Finally they sold it to a very well-known dealer in antiques for $70. This dealer kept the rug lying in his warehouse for another considerable period, and being unable to dispose of it, offered to sell it back to the architects who declined to repurchase.

Last summer there came to Toronto one of the world's greatest experts on antique rugs, and he was entertained at the home of one of the architects. In the course of conversation he told of a wonderful rug three hundred years old which had been looted from the palace of the Empress Dowager and had disappeared. He had never seen it, but had a minute description of it.

"Why, that very rug is in Toronto," said his host. "I had it in my office for months."

The expert was amazed. "Where is it now?" he demanded, all excitement. "It's worth $500 a square foot."

"Well, I can buy it back any time I want it for $70," said the architect.

A deal was struck then and there. The dealer knew an American connoisseur who would willingly pay five thousand dollars for it, and it was agreed that the two architects and the expert should secure the rug, sell it, and go thirds on the profits. Justifiable one of them sought out the dealer in antiques and told him he had come to buy back that Chinese rug.

"Here's what's left of it. I'll make you a present of it," said the dealer, bowing him out a sorry fragment. "You know we had a fire in here the other day."

And in that architect's office today lies the charred and ruined fragment of what was once the most valuable Chinese rug in the world.

Few Big Ranches Left.

There are practically but four thousand head cattle left in the Canadian west, exclusive of British Columbia, which could make a total of big herds, and most ranches stocked with from 6,000 to 8,000 head. The large herds, perhaps 3,000 head of cattle, will soon considerably, large herds, perhaps 1,000 to 2,000. In addition to the cattle ranches there are several large horse cattle ranches, which have from 2,000 to 4,000 head of horses.

The ranchmen have recently acquired 12 special leases of vast tracts of land ceded to the Government agreement to occupy same for a period of 21 years. There is, therefore, a likelihood of there being some big ranches for many years to come. The settlement not already having grazing leases are mostly endeavoring to acquire them.

A Treasure Hunt.

Another expedition is being formed at Victoria, B.C., to seek the treasure of Cocos Island off Costa Rica, reported to be valued at $50,000,000. Capt. Fred Hackett, who commanded the Amherst and the Blakely's expeditions, arrived there recently and left for Seattle to inspect a vessel which may be purchased for the present expedition to the island, where the captain of the runaway York Duke of Iwa is reported to have buried the treasures placed on board by the people of Callao when the Peruvian port was being besieged during the war with Chili, and where also a pirate is believed to have buried his ill-gotten gains.

A Postman's Record.

"Tom" Beale, a former Toronto postman, was recently presented with a long-service medal by Postmaster Rogers. For 29 years he was never even late for duty. He is 51 years old and was superannuated a year ago.

"No," said the editor, "we can't use your story. There's too much originality about it."

"Too much originality!" echoed the contributor. "Why, I thought you wanted original matter."

"So we do, answered the editor, "but we draw the line at spelling

I am glad to say it is a darker color than my hair was before I became bald."—Harry Reid; 10 Manhattan St., Rochester, N.Y.

A very pleasant time was spent at the home of Mr. Wm. McCullough, on the evening of Dec. 15th, when a number of his neighbors and friends assembled and presented him and his sister Elizabeth with an address and presentation of a gold watch and a beautiful silver butter dish and com bined sugar bowl and spoon holder, on the eve of their departure from the neighborhood. After spending the evening with music, dancing and other games, and partaking of a lunch served by the ladies, they all returned to their homes well pleased with the evening's entertainment. The following is the address, which was read by John Campbell, the presentation being made by Daniel Murphy and Agnes G. McGuire.

Mr. and Miss McCullough,—Having learned that you contemplate soon moving from our midst, we, your friends and neighbors, cannot allow you to depart without expressing in a great regret we experience at your departure. During the eighteen years of your sojourn amongst us we have always found in you true and sympathetic neighbors, ever ready to cheer or aid us in our difficulties. We shall miss your presence greatly, but it may be a satisfaction to you to know that your kind deeds will never be suffered from our memory. We regret your departure from amongst us, but trust that what you may lose you may in the future pursue, prosperity and success may follow on your path. We beg that you, Mr. and Miss McCullough, will accept this watch and silverware, as a small token of the esteem and affection of your friends. When in the future you look upon them we hope it will bring to your remembrance the well wishes of those amongst whom you have spent so many years.

Signed in behalf of neighbors,
Mrs. Daniel Murphy,
Agnes G. McGuire,
John Campbell.

CROYDON.

On Thursday evening, 17th inst., a very pleasing event, viz., a masquerade party, took place at the residence of Mr. Geo. Barriger, of this place. Guests from Tamworth, Selby and surrounding neighborhood were present, and the orderly conduct of the gentlemen present, made the party a most decided success. Music was furnished by the "Croydon Orchestral Quartette of violinists, Messrs. Dan. and Jas. Metrigar, Kellar and Close, with Miss Myrtle Galbraith and Iler Mc Gill accompanying with piano and cornet. The music, it is unnecessary to say, was magnificent. Following is a list of the masqueraders and the characters they personated: Wm. McKeown, Lord Roberts; A. McKeown, Tom Thumb; S. McKeown, Rudyard Kipling; H. Piper, Brown Bear; W. Galbraith, Pat Powers; W. Deline, King of Bachers; E. Galbraith, a Brownie; J. Doupe, a clown; J. Kellar, Indian War dancer; S. Doupe, Tom Long boat; Miss L. Campbell, Fairy Queen; Miss S. Sills, Cleopatra; Miss M. South, Hiawatha; Miss M. McGregor, a Canadian girl; Miss P. Whiteman, a gypsy Goddess; Miss P. Bawn, an Irish girl; Miss Bradshaw, Mother Goose; Mr. G. Barrager, host, Lord Macbeth; Mrs. G. Barrager, hostess, Lady Macbeth. Many of the guests were unaware of the fact that there was to be anything but a common party so wore no costumes, and consequently their names do not appear. Now, Mr. Editor, we would just say that our little parties held in this vicinity get a very rough name. It is a source of wonder to all the Croydon readers why such should be the opinion of outsiders. Just let them attend one like that held on Thursday evening last, and we think they will go away satisfied.—Mr. Wagar, who in this county will they receive better treatment and meet more genteel company than will be found present at the Croydon parties.

A WISE ACT.

The action of the County Council in making arrangements with the House of Providence and House of Industry, Kingston, for the care of our poor should receive the highest commendation of the public of this County, as it obviates the necessity of an expenditure of thousands of dollars in the erection of a House of Refuge, of which our neighboring counties—Hastings and Prince Edward—have had experience, to their regret. If our County Councillors all acted as wisely in all matters the members of it would probably remain in office for many years.

Napanee Beats Kingston, Deseronto and Toronto.

People who formerly traded elsewhere now send or come from these and surrounding villages and bring their money to Napanee.
Can they stand it?
How long will they last?
How do they get their goods so cheap? is daily remarked by customers and competitors. We simply say we gladly sell you all you want at prices advertised.
Our goods are the best that money can buy and fresh direct from the manufacturers. Our canned corn at 70c and tomatoes at 80c per dozen, is less than any retail grocer can buy them for. We advise you to get a case of each while they last. Quality is A. 1.
Wishing you all the compliments of the season. Newman-Livingston & Co.
